A Really Big Ocean.
A Three-Word Catch.
A Ground-Flea Cure.
Beautiful Leg Prize.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

HEARST RANCH, SAN SIMEON, Cal., Feb. 16.

THE HOUSE here stands on a hill about 2,000 feet high. One window of your room looks toward the Pacific, smooth as a pond, glittering in sunlight, and stretching west 7,000 miles. Fold the Pacific over, to the east on your Mercator projection map, and it covers the United States, crosses the Atlantic, and reaches out toward Constantinople. It's a big ocean, and who knows what mines and oil wells are under it. Giant industrial submarines will go looking for them, some day, Mr. Owen D. Young, chairman of General Electric, should start that. It would be more amusing and worthwhile than the presidency.

FROM ANOTHER window, you look over ranges of mountain, stretching farther than the eye can reach, all covered with bunch grass, clover, wild oats and live oak trees, so brilliantly green that it seems unnatural.

You would enjoy a ride over these mountains to the Pico farm, part of the 240,000-acre ranch, and to the Haras for Arabian horses.

Don Poncho rides along, getting on and off his horse as lightly as a boy. To him the 20-mile ride, up and down steep mountainsides, is only "a little exercise before breakfast, to start the day."

HE HAD charge of the horses here for Senator Hearst, 51 years ago, as he has charge of them now, for Senator Hearst's son. But, says he, horses are not as good as they used to be. However, he supplies horses perfectly trained that go down a slant of 45 degrees, on soft slippery grass, sliding on their hocks, using their front hoofs as auxiliary brakes, and quite good enough.

CAN A MAN willing to work make a living here? Don Poncho says:

"Yes. I have a friend, he came here with one extra shirt tied up in a red handkerchief. Now he has a nice family and is worth $100,000. He sold milk and hay, butter and cheese, raised everything to feed his family, buying nothing but sugar and coffee. His children all had good education at grade and high schools. Now he buys everything, automobiles, nice clothes for his family. But he worked."

The "catch," as some will observe, is in the last three words.

SOME ONE SAID that, doubtless God could make a better berry than the strawberry, but doubtless, God never did. Doubtless Divine Providence could make a more beautiful country than this Pacific Coast, but doubtless, it has not been made on this earth. What heaven is like, with foundations of jacinthe, each gate made of a single pearl, as the Bible tells us, we cannot know, yet.

GOING BACK to the dull news, you gather these:

Uncle Sam, after much haggling, decides to spend $20,000,000, for relief.

Without any haggling, the country spent many times that amount, for Armenians, Russians and others. But that was in war, which, strangely, makes us generous.

Many a man "too busy" to hear a scientific lecture, will stand indefinitely to watch a dog fight.

SCIENTISTS SAY typhus fever is spread by fleas that first bite rats, then humans. Recalling that Rocky Mountain fever, spread by ticks, was conquered by "tick-juice inoculation," the scientists suggest that a similar remedy for typhus may be made of the rat-biting flea. Ground-up fleas as a medicine would not be pleasing.

HUMAN BEINGS and their governments should have the energy to eliminate rats. Then fleas could not bite them. Similarly they should wipe out crocodiles that supply the death germs of sleeping sickness to the tsetse fly.

Impossible? Suppose each rat contained a gold dollar and each crocodile a $10 bill, how long would they last?

TURKEY, SEEKING to uncover the faces, and also the legs of her women, starts a competition for "the most beautiful pair of legs in all Turkey."

That has a purpose, in Turkey, seeking to abolish leg swathing skirts.

BUT WHAT do legs really amount to? Nothing except for transportation. What counts is the forehead, and Morrill Goddard, who sets the pace in useful enterprise, should offer in the American Weekly, at least $10,000 for the most perfectly developed woman's forehead in America.

General shape of head to count 25 points, height of forehead to count 50 points, and serenity of expression 25 points.

RUSSIA STILL refuses to collapse, financially, or industrially. She is to have a fur auction, in competition with the great auctions of London, Paris, Montreal, etc.

Offering 1,250,000 of the finest skins, Russia might swamp us with sable coats and ruin the market which now stands at $45,000 for a fairly good coat.

ALSO RUSSIA has established her first gasoline cracking plant, large and efficient enough to annoy Sir Henri

WILL BUILD $1,000,000 TERMINAL

P. & W. Va. Insists Sale of Tunnel Will Not Affect Proposed Trunk System

A modern $1,000,000 terminal near West Liberty avenue will replace the downtown station of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad as a result of the contemplated sale of the bridge and tunnel to the county for a traffic tube, H. W. Nethken, vice president of the railroad, announced today.

Sale of the tunnel will not affect the plan for formation of a fifth trunk line system, Nethken asserted, as the proposed new terminal would give better facilities. No step will be taken without authority of the Public Service Commission, he said.

REPORTS DENIED

This announcement was made following reports in railroad circles that the abandonment of the terminal would permanently bar the Pittsburgh and West Virginia from entrance into a new Great Lakes to Seaboard System, for many years planned by the Taplin interests, and part of the Wabash trunk line plan of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

In answer to this, Nthken said that the present terminal is inadequate for handling transfers from cars to trucks, because of the 40 foot elevation over the street.

GOVERNOR ASKS RATE QUIZ HERE

Electric Power Charges and 25-Cent Bus Fare Cited To Utilities Inquiry

By E. W. PRENDERGAST, Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 16.—Warned by Gov. Gifford Pinchot that he would not tolerate any efforts to "whitewash" the public utilities, the Senate's investigation of the Public Service Commission got under way today, confronted by a demand that the special committee conducting the inquiry find answer to these questions propounded by the Governor:

Why do Pittsburgh consumers pay a 7-cent rate for electrical current while consumers at Worcester, Mass., importing its coal 400 miles, are charged 5 cents!

Why is the Pittsburgh public compelled to pay a 25-cent bus fare while other places get service for 10 and 15 cents!

CHALLENGE TO COMMITTEE

Gov. Pinchot laid his challenge before the committee in a letter sent to Senator W. H. Earnest, of Dauphin County, its chairman, in which he asserted he would be glad to appear as a witness.

The letter questioned the sincerity of the Earnest investigation, and in it the Governor suggested altogether 11 questions for the committee to consider, and asserted he would present others after these 11 had been investigated.

Members of the committee expressing their resentment at the Governor's attack, promised to begin issuing subpenas immediately, with the possibility that some witnesses would appear later at today's session.

In his letter, Pinchot said:

"The Earnest investigating committee is under grave suspicion of being set up not to investigate but to whitewash the public utilities. That is be-

Hoover Leadership Saves This Nation From Curse of Dole

THANKS to the unflinching and patriotic leadership of President Hoover, the American people have been saved from the curse of a federal dole.

It is a victory that entitles Mr. Hoover to the thanks and congratulations of all his countrymen because its benefits will be shared by the household of the nation.

Europe's quack remedy for the ills of unemployment and economic distress is not to be found in the new farm loan bill just agreed upon by the Congress and approved by the President.

Under this law no direct distribution of the $15,000,000 farm loan fund it establishes will be permitted.

Every farmer seeking financial assistance from this fund will be required to put up security satisfactory to the government.

The American policy of appropriating "millions for employment but not one cent for dole" will continue to be the national policy. It will not be abandoned in the special interest of any group of citizens.

Expenditures of public money will continue to be limited to public purposes and tax-paid philanthrophy which has distinguished the American people throughout their history.

INVIGOROUSLY opposing the imitation in this free country of Europe's disastrous experiment with the dole the Hearst newspapers have voiced a public sentiment that is as widespread as is the self-respect, self-reliance and independence of American citizenship.

This opposition on the part of the American people to experimentation with any form of European dole is as well founded as it is widespread.

Any senators who may have been in favor of a dole or anything similar to a dole for this country should read recent dispatches from London.

These dispatches tell of the dramatic confession recently made to the House of Commons by the Labor government's chancellor of the exchequer regarding the serious plight to which the dole has reduced England.

England has come to the culmination of her experiment with the dole. The dole fund is already $350,000,000 in debt and the government is threatened with the necessity of asking Parliament for an emergency appropriation of $50,000,000 to help meet this deficit.

CHANCELLOR SNOWDEN did not attempt to minimize the gravity of the situation that England faces. He said:

"Our national position is so grave that drastic and disagreeable measures will have to be taken. In the present condition of industry further taxation would be the last straw."

Here is new evidence, if any were needed, of the truth of all that the Hearst newspapers have said in condemnation of Europe's quack remedy for unemployment.

Here is new vindication, if any were needed, of the wisdom of the fight which has been made in the United States against any imitation of this disastrous and degrading European experiment.

Here is new cause for congratulation, if any were needed, that this fight against any resort to Europe's dole in free America has been won under the leadership of a president who "put the cause above renown."

G. O. P. SPLIT OVER LOAN MEASURE

Longworth Defies Mellon And Leaders to Aid Its Passage; Speed Sought

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON, International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—The House prepared to pass the Bacharach soldiers' "bonus" bill with enthusiasm today, despite a split in the Republican leadership and the active opposition of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

The Senate will handle the measure speedily, as well, and send it to the White House either as the House passed it, or liberalized, Senate leaders predicted.

Opponents of the bill, which raises the loan value of $3,400,000,000 veterans' compensation certificates from 22½ to 50 per cent, looked hopefully to President Hoover for a veto.

COMPROMISE HINT

Reports were received on Capitol Hill the President and the Treasury are ready to approve a measure raising the loan value to 30 per cent and entailing an outlay of $300,000,000.

There were strong indications that passage of the measure as submitted to the House by the Ways and Means Committee would bring a veto. Backers of the plan say it can be passed despite White House disapproval.

The split between Speaker Nicholas Longworth and Representative John Q. Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican leader of the House, came into the open as Tilson issued a statement denouncing the plan to pass the bill under suspension of rules in the House today.

LILLIAN LEITZEL KILLED BY FALL

COPENHAGEN, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Lillian Leitzel, queen of the "big top" and the sawdust ring, lay stilled today in death—the price she paid for having attempted her breath-taking body whirl high in the air once too often.

The end came late yesterday in the midst of delirium brought on by head and spine injuries received Friday night when an iron ring broke and let her fall 45 feet to the floor of Valencia Music Hall, with only a rubber mat to break the impact.

Alfredo Codona, her husband himself a triple somersault trapeze artist, flew from Berlin to her beside. He believed her condition improved when he left the hospital in the afternoon, but shortly after she took a turn for the worse and soon passed away.

A native of Bohemia, the dainty circus performer lived 20 of the 37 years of her life in America, where with the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circuses she made a reputation for thrilling feats at the end of a rope.

Her act was the "giant half flange"—to swing by her right hand from a rope 50 feet or more above the three rings, literally throwing her body over her own shoulder as a pivot. She usually did it just 100 times, but her record was 249 times.

She was near the end of her whirl Friday night when the iron ring to which she held broke. She landed heavily.

When lifted from the ring she protested that she was not hurt, but at the hospital serious injuries to her spine and head were revealed.

Town Hall Site O. K.'d By City

Hhe consent ordinance, necessary to make possible the erection of the Town Hall on the Nicola site in Schenley Farms, was passed unanimously this afternoon by Council, with seven of nine members present. Councilmen M. J. Muldowney and Harry Little were absent.

Last week Former Mayor William Magee headed a large delegation of citizens protesting to Council the passage of the ordinance. He was backed by various business and civic organizations.

Wales Visits Ruins Of Old Inca Capital

The two princes came in airplanes yesterday from Lima where they had been entertained for several days. Just before landing, their planes circled over the fuming volcano, Mt. Misti, and then came down at Poronocche field at its foot.

Mills, Treasury Aide, Thrown From Horse

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Ogden L. Mills, of New York, under-secretary of the treasury, was suffering from strained muscles in the shoulder and neck today following his fall from a horse in Rock Creek Park. He was thrown when the horse stumbled into a hole in the roadway.

DELAY SECRET FOOD REPORT

The joint report of Mayor Kline and Controller J. P. Kerr on the Mayor's investigation of charges against Director of Supplies Bertram L. Succop probably will not be presented to Council today, as expected. Dr. Kerr announced today that he had not completed his findings. It was considered unlikely that the Mayor would present his report without the controller's.

The delay probably will mean that Council will not receive the report until its meeting next Monday.

Director Succop has been accused of favoring high bidders on city food contracts. John D. Houston, of the James W. Houston Company, charged that the L. H. Parke Company was favored time and again.

Houston has announced that if Kline attempts to "whitewash" Succop he will ask a public hearing in Council. At this time he will insist, he says, that the hearing be attended by Succop, Controller Kerr, Dr. J. S. Hammers, superintendent of Mayview, and his dietitians; John M. Irwin, an official of the Parke company, and J. C. Cronin, a Parke salesman.

Council is understood to be willing to grant a hearing at any time Houston requests it.

Whole Wheat Bread Cut to Five Cents

The price of whole wheat bread has been cut to five cents for the one pound loaf by the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, it was announced today. White bread has been selling at five cents a loaf for several months. Announcing the cut, the company said:

"The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company in a nation-wide reduction acts on the suggestion of the United States Senate committee on food prices to meet the country's need of food at reduced prices."

Two Big Companies Here Aid Relief Fund

With leading industrialists and financiers responding to the fund for use in stabilizing employment here, the Allegheny County Emergency Association, Grant Building, expects this week's results to show marked progress.

City Council adopted a resolution this afternoon commending the county association and Edgar J. Kaufmann for their efforts to stabilize the unemployment situation. It was cited that Mayor Charles H. Kline and Council realized the city's welfare department relief work did not solve the situation.

HUMPHREY ANNOUNCES AID

A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company and the Union Switch and Signal Company, announced the two companies will co-operate in what is now known all over the country as the Pittsburgh Plan by contributing to the fund an amount equal to an entire day's payroll of those two industries for an average day in 1929, when in-

'We Must Win War,' Pershing Warned

"The war is up to America—to win or lose." This was Pershing's dramatic message to Washington as the hard-pressed Allies wavered. Today's installment of his memoirs, appearing in the Sun-Telegraph exclusively in Pittsburgh, pictures dark days at the front, yet Gen. Pershing thrilled over the entrance of the famous 1st Division into the battle line.

Butler Begins 7-Day Furlough Tomorrow

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, of the Marine Corps, tomorrow will begin a seven-day furlough from his duties as commandant of the Quantico Marine post. Butler recently was reprimanded by Secretary Adams for alleged derogatory remarks about Premier Mussolini, which brought an American apology to Italy.

Pershing Confined To Bed With Cold

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Gen. John J. Pershing was confined today to his bed in the Metropolitan Club with a cold. The general's office announced the cold was so severe as to prevent his attending the funeral of Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Edwards.

Aimee, Daughter Arrive at Shanghai

SHANGHAI, Feb. 16.—Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, and her daughter, Roberta, arrived here by steamer today.

The daughter said the evangelist was on a voyage around the world for her health. Mrs. McPherson remained in a hotel room and declined to receive callers.

100 Chinese Drown As Ship Hits Rock

CANTON, China, Feb. 16—(AP.)—One hundred persons drowned in the Pearl River south of here today when a steamer with 500 aboard struck a rock and sank. Those aboard had been celebrating the Chinese New Year.

'3-X' WARNS OF MORE KILLINGS

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—(INS.)—The maniac who styles himself "3-X" and who credits himself with the murder of two men last summer in Queens has written another long letter to the New York Evening Journal announcing a coming series of killings, and again apologizing for not carrying his last promise to kill a man.

The letter was published today after police had established it as authentic.

The maniac wrote:

"I warned you of troubles. You have had already plenty. You are due for more, far worse than you have had."

Police, describing the man as one of the most dangerous maniacs they ever combatted, have warned against couples parking in little-used lanes.

'HYMIE' PRODUCES DOUBLE IN OHIO SLAYING QUIZ

MISTAKE IN IDENTITY, HE SAYS

'Twin' Resembles Pittsburgh Suspect and Lives Near Cleveland Death Scene

To prove that the arrest of "Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin in connection with the murder of William K. Potter, former Cleveland councilman, was a case of mistaken identity, his counsel, Samuel S. Rothenberg, was to produce a Cleveland man with a striking resemblance of the suspect at the extradition proceedings in Harrisburg this afternoon.

Gov. Pinchot is expected to act on the extradition proceedings late today. Following the hearing a deputy attorney general will make a recommendation to the Governor.

Rosenberg said the "twin" whose name his attorney said also is Hymie Martin and who lived next door to the apartment house in which Potter's body was found, left for the capitol last night. Save for being a little thinner and shorter the man strongly resembles Hymie Rosenberg declared, and he is even wearing the kind of clothes the suspect wore when he was arrested and identified as the occupant of the apartment in which the murder occurred.

BLONDE HUNT WANES

The hearing on a petition for a writ of habeas corpus has been postponed until Wednesday at the request of Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt until the extradition papers from Ohio reached Gov. Pinchot.

Search in Pittsburgh for blonde Mary Outland of Akron, an alleged friend of Martin, with whom he was believed to have been seen near the Cleveland apartment February 3 when Potter was slain was virtually abandoned. Telephone calls alleged to have been made from Columbus by Mrs. Joan Lewis to the blonde were traced to two homes in Dormont. Detectives visited the houses, but found no trace of the Outland woman.

ASSOCIATE SURRENDERS

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Solomon Polfonsky, associate of Martin, surrendered to Steubenville (O.) police today. Polfonsky, police said, obtained Ohio license plates for Martin's car, recovered in Pittsburgh, Saturday.

According to Detective John Toner, of Cleveland, Martin purchased the auto the day after Potter's body was discovered.

He had begun negotiations for the car four hours after Potter's body was discovered, the detective said.

Belief that another suspect, Julius Redlich, under arrest in Cleveland, was a member of the bandit gang which staged the $50,000 holdup of the Manchester Savings Bank and Trust Company, ended when two bank employes failed to identify him yesterday, according to City Detective Walter Monaghan, who accompanied the two employes.

Machinery Replacing Young Men, Not Old

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Labor-saving machinery hits the young man, not the old, according to Arthur E. Morgan, president of Antioch College, in a symposium on unemployment. A census conducted by Antioch showed, Morgan said, a constantly increasing proportion of older men in industry in the last 20 years, and a decreasing proportion of younger men.

Newton W. Baker, president of the American Association for adult education, who also participated in the symposium, placed some responsibility for re-educating the unemployed for other work on industry.

Canton Bank Closed, Executive Arrested

CANTON, O., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—C. A. Hanner, vice president of the Canton Bank of Canton, was arrested today on a charge of embezzlement and the State Banking Department took over the institution to preserve its assets, following discovery of a $20,500 shortage in the accounts.

Officers of the bank issued a statement expressing belief that the institution is solvent and that all depositors will be paid in full through orderly liquidation.

Federal Prisoner Dies in County Jail

Arthur Scott, Negro, 25, a prisoner in Allegheny County jail, died there today. Pneumonia was believed the cause of death, although an autopsy will be held. Scott, a federal prisoner, had been serving an eight-month sentence since last September for violation of the narcotic act.

Free Congress Funerals Hit; Corkscrew One Item

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—A movement has been started to abolish the custom of holding official funerals for members of Congress at government expense.

Representative Sumners (Dem.), of Texas, called the practice "barbaric" today in pointing to types of items that have crept into expense accounts of funeral parties.

"Corkscrew, 50 cents," was on one bill. "Paid setters up, $3," was another Sumners cited in discussing his resolution to stop paying the bills of funeral delegations out of contingent funds.

Sumners said he introduced his resolution, not because of such items, but because he could find no excuse for so favoring a handful of legislators at the expense of the Treasury.

Expense records of funeral occasions show a number of odd expenditures. Time was when those in charge selected not one, but two or three sites for a vault for the deceased public servant. During the Thirty-first Congress they spent $30 for refreshments for those at the wake of a statesman.

Ten years ago it cost Congress $7,120 to bury a Pacific Coast representative. Items have now been "standardized" so the average congressional funeral costs from $1,200 to $1,500.

Humphrey, a member of the executive committee of the emergency association and chairman of the committee on individual solicitations, said:

"The Westinghouse Airbrake Company and the Union Switch and Signal Company are contributing their full quota as provided by the plan agreed upon. We believe this movement, whereby industries and mercantile and financial interests of Allegheny County are undertaking to provide employment, is immeasurably better for all concerned than any distribution of doles. It not only stimulates the community's self-reliance and prevents distress, but directly tends to hasten full business recovery.

'PROGRESSIVE SPIRIT'

"In my judgment our great industries here in Allegheny County have never better illustrated their progressive spirit and their capacity for real initiative than by the manner in which they are rallying to the support of this emergency program. It is gratifying, although not entirely a surprise, to find that the Pittsburgh Plan as it is now called is receiving careful study and most favorable comment in all parts of the country."

PLANTS, STORES ASSIST

The quota contributions to the emergency association's employment fund thus far announced by the association's executive committee include those of the Westinghouse Airbrake Company and the Union Switch and Signal Company, Gulf Refining Company, the Philadelphia Company and its affiliated public utility corporations serving the Pittsburgh district, as well as the Retail Merchants Association of Pittsburgh, embracing the following department stores: Kaufmann's, the Joseph Horne Company, Gimbel Brothers, Rosenbaum's, Meyer Jonasson & Co., Harris Department Stores, Frank & Seder, and the Lewin-Neiman Company.

BILL READY FOR HOSPITAL HERE

HARRISBURG, Feb. 16.—An appropriation of $25,000 to begin a survey for the state's proposed psychiatric hospital in Pittsburgh will be asked for, it or tomorrow by Senator Frank J. Harris.

The hospital, ground for which was offered by the University of Pittsburgh in the desire that it become a part of the medical center in Oakland, would be the first state institution for mental care and study.

The appropriation asked in the Harris bill would go to the department of property and supplies, of which James A. Malone is head, with the instructions that the necessary preliminary plans be made. A similar institution will be sought in Philadelphia.

NEW TERMINAL TO BE BUILT

other facilities to be constructed at the south end of the tunnel indicate that the cost will exceed $1,000,000. This will give the line modern steam-track facilities, warehouses and other features superior to those now existing.

Nethken insisted that this modern freight terminal on the road's main line will make its value to a new trunk line superior to that at present.

TO CONSULT I. C. C.

He declared that it is foolish for anyone to imply that the road would make such a step without petitioning the commission's at Washington and Harrisburg.

Nethken made no comment on the elimination of the passenger station. Many railroad men are of the opinion that a new trunk line would not be particularly interested in developing passenger service since revenue from this class of business has been steadily declining in recent years.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has had no opportunity to express an opinion on a plan to form a trunk line without regard to passenger facilities. In view of the highly competitive condition of the roads in the passenger field and the slump in travel, it is considered probable that the commission might take a favorable attitude toward the concentration of efforts on freight.

CO-OPERATION URGED TO AID COAL TRADE

National Association Chief Deplores Restraint on Industry, But Sees Hope

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—The bituminous coal industry would be made prosperous if 300 of the larger companies would co-operate instead of fighting each other, C. E. Bockus, president of the National Coal Association, told the coal division of the American Institute of Mining and Matallurgical Engineers meeting today, Bockus said.

"The coal man can never expect government help such as has been tried for the farmer, but might it not be reasonable to expect that some day there may be a freedom from the unreasonable restraint of industry so that there could be co-operation that would adjust supply to demand and secure an economic return for a great natural resource?

"MAY TAKE TIME"

"I am none too confident that at this time such freedom would accomplish the results desired; but ultimately that would appear to be the only signboard pointing to a path out of the existing morass."

While declaring that the future undoubtedly would hold great things for coal, Bockus stated that bituminous coal will do well to hold its own in the next 10 years. He added:

"Dependent on these next few years may also be our fate as to whether we are to survive, to be in existence when new uses and better demand for coal have changed from hopes and prophecies to accomplished facts."

DOUBTFUL ON EXPORTS

Weighing the present possibilities of widening and increasing markets for bituminous coal, Bockus was not cheerful about the export field helping the present situation.

Explaining that the export rail rate to our principal coal port is now 80 per cent above the prewar level, Bockus said a substantial cut in rail rates—even if it did bring an increase in exports to halt the figures of 1926—would go only part way in solving the depressed conditions in the bituminous industry.

Papers on mining and oil and gas operations will be presented by six Pittsburghers at the annual meeting of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. The local men are Ralph E. Davis, consulting engineer; Dr. Lewis E. Young, vice president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company; J. French Robinson, chief engineer of the Peoples Natural Gas Company; Charles R. Fettke, instructor at Carnegie Institute of Technology; Ionel Gardescu, instructor at Pitt, and R. L. Auchmuty, mining engineer.

MAYOR WILLIAM HALE THOMPSON . . . "LET ME THINK!"

"Big Bill" in confrence, as 't'were, with Chicago's building commissioner, Chris Paschen. About buildings? Why, no, about the circus campaign "Big Bill's" making for re-election as mayor.

HOUSE TO VOTE ON BONUS BILL

of the Ways and Means Committee, who voted against the bill in committee, but reserved the right to change his opinion later, also came out flatly against the bill.

HAWLEY OPPOSED

Hawley said he would lead the opposition to the measure, while Representative Bacharach will pilot the measure, thus presenting the unusual spectable of a committee chairman opposing his own committee.

Under suspension of rules, but 40 minutes of debate is allowed in the House. Tilson declared that passage of an important measure by this method threatens the prestige of the House. The House, he said, will be forced to act without adequate explanation of the bill and "no one knows what additional obligations will be imposed by it," Tilson said:

"Secretary Mellon has indicated that such a measure will disrupt all the well-laid plans of the Treasury for the immediate future. Under such circumstances, to plunge ahead would be, in my judgment, incurring a dangerous and unjustifiable risk."

Chairman Hawley, announcing he would lead the opposition, said:

"In view of the Treasury statement, I don't see how we can help being forced to a bond issue to meet the cost, the bond issue to be retired later by taxation."

He reiterated that he opposed a tax increase this session, but expects a tax increase in the future.

Representative Patman (Dem.), of Texas, original backer of the full cash payment plan, said he would "go along" with the Bacharach bill, but said the Senate would liberalize it, adding:

"I think the Senate will at least cut off the interest, if it does not authorize full cash payment."

CONGRESS WORK SPEEDED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—After appropriating $67,000,000 for drought relief, but facing demands for more funds to aid the suffering, the Hoover administration today faced the task of enacting 10 major appropriation bills in 15 days to avoid a special session of the new Congress after March 4.

The drought relief question appeared settled on the surface when Congress finally passed the $20,000,000 additional food-loan bill, which President Hoover quickly signed. There were rumors the minority, who opposed this measure on the ground of "inadequacy," would move to appropriate $25,000,000 more for the aid of drought sufferers too poor to take loans under the other bills.

Pensions Approved For World War Vets

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The House veterans committee today approved a bill to provide pensions for dependents of World War veterans, from the date of death of the veterans.

The bill would provide $26 a month for a widow and one orphan of World War veterans, regardless of whether there was any service connection with the cause of death. It would provide $6 for each additional orphan and would exclude widows without children.

IRENE, DAGUE DUE TO DIE NEXT WEEK

Secret Journey to Rockview Planned; Custom to Fix Order of Going to Chair

BELLEFONTE, Pa., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Officials of Rockview Penitentiary are going ahead with arrangements to carry out the death sentence of Irene Schroeder and W. Glenn Dague on Monday, February 23.

Paying no attention to the possibility of the State Board of Pardons acting favorably on the application for commutation of the death sentences, officials are perfecting plans even to the extent of looking up precedent as to which of the three condemned to die on that day will go first to the electric chair.

Under present plans the "Trigger Woman" and Dague, sentenced to die for the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, will not be brought to Rockview until next Sunday night, and may not reach the death house until almost the hour set for the electrocution.

Every effort will be made to keep the hour of their departure from New Castle a secret to avoid curious crowds.

CLERGYMAN APPLIES

Prison officials have been besieged with applications for permission to witness the electrocution. One application, prison officials said, came from a clergyman, who declared he wished to see it because of the educational advantage it might be to him. Newspapermen from various sections of the state, as well as New York, have appealed for passes. The number is limited by law to fewer than one dozen.

On the same day Wilfred Flood, of Luzerne County, is scheduled to be electrocuted. According to the precedent, which requires that when two or more persons are electrocuted they go to the chair in the numerical order of their death warrants, Flood will go first.

The numbers of the Dague and Schroeder death warrants will determine which of them will go first.

FIRST TO FACE CHAIR

HARRISBURG, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—If Irene Schroeder is executed in the electric chair at Rockview Penitentiary next week, she will be the first woman put to death in this manner in Pennsylvania, and the first executed in the last 50 years.

Mrs. Schroeder took this into cognizance in her petition to the State Board of Pardons for commutation, declaring the policy of the commonwealth had been against the execution of women.

DRY ROW AIRED IN SENATE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—The controversy among Democratic leaders over the probable attitude of the party toward prohibition in 1932 was aired in the Senate this afternoon when Senator Morris Sheppard (Dem.), of Texas, co-author of the Eighteenth Amendment, denied a declaration by Jouett Shouse, executive director of the Democratic National Committee, that the next Democratic platform would be anti-dry.

A lengthy debate followed, featured by an argument between Senator Tydings (Dem.), of Maryland, an anti-dry, and Senator Black (Dem.), of Alabama, a dry, over the manufacture of cider and fruit juices. Tydings challenged the drys to amend the Volstead act so as to prohibit the manufacture of these fruit juices.

Mary Pickford, Film Editor In Radio Chat Wednesday

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 16.—(Universal.)—Millions of admirers of Mary Pickford, beloved screen actress, will hear her charming voice next Wednesday, February 18, at 2:30 o'clock, Eastern standard time, over the Columbia Broadcasting System, which reaches into every city, town and hamlet in the United States.

Miss Pickford recently refused offers of $5,000 a week to broadcast, but on this occasion she is gladly going on the air because of her long friendship and affection for Louella O. Parsons, motion picture editor of the Hearst newspapers and Universal Service.

Miss Pickford and Miss Parsons will chat over the radio for half an hour—and what stories they will have to tell! They have seen the industry grow from its early days when Mary was first "the little Biograph girl (players' names weren't used then), through the days when she became "America's Sweetheart" and right down to the present when talking picture plays are sweeping the world.

Miss Pickford is to act as California's representative in receiving five carloads of oranges and lemons for the drought sufferers of Arkansas. These are donated by the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, which is composed of 12,500 California Sunkist citrus growers. She will seal the last car and send it on its way. The fruit to be distributed through the agency of the Red Cross.

The two old friends, Miss Pickford and Miss Parsons, will hold their informal chat in the studio of Station KHJ in this city. Thousands of inquiries have been made about it. The answer to all of them is that they will talk between 2:30 and 3 p. m. on Wednesday and may be heard anywhere in the United States by tuning in upon the stations allied with the Columbia System.

Coolidge Doubts Merit Of Competition Curb

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Feb. 16.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

A movement appears to be starting to authorize agreements and practices now prohibited as restraints of trade. It is proposed to safeguard the public by having such measures approved by some national board.

One of the main arguments favoring this policy is conservation of natural resources. It is also an attempt to stabilize trade. Under this method production could be limited, sales territory divided among different concerns and prices determined. The real object is to regulate competition.

Calvin Coolidge

It may be that something of this nature would be an improvement over present conditions. All the burder is on its proponents to show this, for in general experience commerce has been most healthy under free and reasonable competition. If producers combine, consumers will combine. The danger is that opportunity will be greatly restricted and indirectly, if not directly, the government board will have to fix prices. Possibly we are moving in that direction.

It is done in the case of public utilities. But because everybody is wiser than somebody, markets are no respecters of government prices. It will be a wise board that can substitute its judgment for competition. We can only curb selfishness. No law can eliminate it.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

ALFONSO NAMES FOE HEAD OF NEW CABINET

EXPLANATION OF ARRESTS DEMANDED

International News Service.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Investigation of what authorities say is an international organization of narcotics smugglers went ahead today with secret agents of the United States and Canada co-operating in the hunt for fresh information.

What action, if any, will be taken as a result of raids conducted at two exclusive North Side hotels by federal men, remained a question today. In the course of the raids, two persons of international prominence were taken into custody for questioning.

SUITE RAIDED

Federal men first raided the suite of W. Perkins Bull, K. C. (King's Counselor) of London and Toronto, arresting Bull. He was held for questioning until an early hour Saturday morning. Bull, a rich landowner having estates in England, Canada and Cuba, is said to be an intimate friend of King George, of England.

Next the raiders appeared at the apartment of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley, heiress to the fortune of William H. Horlick, Racine, Wis., manufacturer. She likewise was taken in custody and questioned along with Bull.

Attorneys for both persons have demanded a complete explanation from federal authorities, maintaining the raids were conducted without legal basis or justification. As yet the federal agents have offered no explanation of the raids.

WOMAN'S HUSBAND SUES

An injunction petition brought against Bull by Mrs. Sidley's estranged husband, Dr. John Streeter Sidley, of Racine, will be considered before a master of chancery on Wednesday. Dr. Sidley has brought a damage suit for $250,000 against Bull, alleging that he had suffered a nervous breakdown because private detectives had been shadowing him for three years. The injunction suit asks that the agents be called off.

Attorneys on both sides indicated today that notables of England, Canada and America may be summoned as witnesses at the injunction hearing.

MAY CALL FANNIE WARD

Among these notables, who are friends of Mr. Bull, are Fannie Ward, actress, and her daughter, Lady Dorothy Mabel Plunkett, wife of the British peer, Baron T. C. Plunkett, attorneys said. Another is Bull's sister, Mrs. R. O. Mackay, of Toronto, who was presented at the court of St. James last season.

Federal agents in the course of their investigation said they had encountered countless private detectives, apparently in the hire of all principals in the case. Some are shadowing the principals, while others are following the trail of the sleuths who are doing the shadowing, the agents said.

SPAIN'S KING YIELDS HIS POWER

International News Service.

MADRID, Feb. 16.—King Alfonso XIII bowed to the will of the majority of the country's political leaders today when he accepted the complete formula of Jose Sanchez Guerra, former premier and ex-rebel, for the solution of the country's constitutional crisis.

The formula provides immediate election of a constituent Cortes, authorized to decide whether Spain shall continue to be a monarchy or become a republic.

Until this decision is made Guerra will hold practically autocratic power in Spain.

The announcement of the King's acceptance of Guerra's program did not state definitely that he will "take a vacation" in the meantime, but the program means practically that.

MONARCHISTS FAIL

A series of conferences with leading politicians melted away the King's early hopes of forming a cabinet of monarchist supporters to succeed the resigned Berenguer ministry.

Sunday it had been predicted that Alfonso would call a Liberal concentration cabinet headed by Count de Ramonones, Francisco Cambo and the Marquis of Alhacemas, who would probably convoke a constitutional assembly which would guarantee all political liberties and still not diminish royal prerogatives. However, this monarchial hope was blasted when Senor Cambo, Spain's powerful industrialist and influential politician, advised the king to form a cabinet based on the constitutional reform group.

DISORDERS CURBED

With the political situation still in a suspended state and the radical press shouting for immediate expulsion of the King, Spain watched developments restlessly and with increasing tension. First indication of the struggle between the throne and its opponents became evident Sunday in Madrid and Seville, where boisterous crowds shouted for a republic.

"Long live the republic! Down with the King!" resounded in the streets of both cities. Clashes occurred between police and political demonstrators, but only a few persons were injured. Republican elements attempted to hold mass meetings, but were dispersed by police.

GANDHI SPEEDS TO PARLEY

NEW DELHI, India, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The peace of India will be at stake either tomorrow or Wednesday when Mahatma Gandhi, Nationalist leader, reaches here from Allahabad to confer with Viceroy Lord Irwin as "man to man" on the problems facing the country.

If the conversation between the two men is satisfactory to Gandhi, he, after conference with others of the working committee of all India National Congress, is expected to call off the nationalist civil disobedience campaign and proceed with working out a federation dominion status under the plans evolved at the London conference.

The viceroy's invitation to come here was telegraphed to Gandhi, who, at Allahabad, was observing his weekly day of silence. He received the invitation, however, and late this evening boarded a train which is bringing him here.

A feeling of confidence prevails here that the way will be found for co-operation of the nationalist leaders with the government in working out the details of a new Indian constitution.

RUSS PUSH WAR ON RELIGION

MOSCOW, Feb. 16.—(Universal.)—The Soviet government seized upon Sunday, a day of worship all over the Christian world, to declare war against religious influence in the schools.

It was announced as "a counter-assault against the orthodox Protestant church," which, the manifesto charged, is trying to influence Soviet school children against the atheistic propaganda of the government.

The first shot was fired by the commissariat of education, which voted funds, and called upon school teachers to intensify their anti-religious instruction. The commissariat appealed to the movie trust to produce special anti-Christian films for juvenile consumption.

The commissariat's manifesto stated:

"We cannot allow the morality of our children to be degraded by religion. The churches recently had the audacity to creep into our schools. In one school tiny crosses were distributed among pupils."

POPE DEPLORES LAW LAXITY

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 16—(AP.)—Receiving Lenten curates today, Pope Pius XI made several complaints against the Italian government and urged the curates to carry on agitation in favor of better application by the Italian state of the terms of the lateran treaties.

The Pontiff, in a speech to the curates, declared that insufficient government action is being taken against immorality and that too many attempts are being made to break the Sabbath.

Many moving pictures being exhibited in Rome, he said, are of a definitely anti-religious character and he urged that steps be taken to rectify this situation.

McMasters Leaves Relatives $125,000

His niece, Meta I. Guy, is left the income from half of his $125,000 estate by the will of James V. McMasters, former alderman, of 327 Oakland avenue. In the event of her death the income is bequeathed to her children, or, if she be childless, the income goes to his nephew, Glen E. Guy. The remaining half of the estate is left to his brother, Richard E. McMasters, and to his sister, Mrs. Della McClure, with the provision that after his brother's death, his nephew, Glen E. Guy, shall be given his portion of the estate.

300 STRANDED AUTOISTS FED

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Storm clouds still hovered over water-soaked Arizona as measures were taken to feed hundreds of motorists, stranded by impassable roads.

Three hundred motorists, mostly tourists, driven from auto camps at Wellton by a flood which followed a cloudburst Friday, were fed by Brother Noah, mayor, city marshal, and restaurant man at Tacna, east of Wellton.

One life was lost in the Wellton flood, and property damage was extensive.

Firemen's Battle To Save Baby Fails

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Feb. 16.—Seven New Kensington firemen, who had worked in shifts for 168 hours at the bedside of William Sinclair, 7-week-old twin son of William S. Sinclair, lost their battle early today when the child died of pneumonia.

Under the direction of Assistant Chief Michael A. Carron, the firemen used 450 feet of carbogen in their attempt to save the baby's life.

2 NEW AIR LINES STARTED HERE

Two new air express lines from New York and Boston to Pittsburgh, the Pacific Coast and the Southwest were inaugurated today from Bettis Field.

Bearing a letter to Pittsburgh's Mayor Charles H. Kline from acting Mayor Joseph McGrath, of Boston, the first air express plane of the Pittsburgh Airways Company—affiliated with the Colonial Air Lines, the New York, Philadelphia and Washington Airways, and the Western Union—arrived from Newark at 1:40 p. m.

In his six-passenger Travelair cabin monoplane, Pilot Harry Taylor brought 75 pounds of express for local department stores.

Returning, the plane bore six packages from Mayor Kline. Each contained a key to the city, and mayors of Harrisburg, ork, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Newark and Boston:

"In honor of linking our city by the system of air express accept, with my compliments, the official key to the City of Pittsburg, with many assurances of my regards."

Carrying five passengers, including two girls, 80 pounds of express and air mail, Pilots Robert Leroy and Carl Rach landed their trimotor plane, City of New York, at 12:01.

When the plane left New York 14 passengers occupied every available seat. The line is operated by the Transcontinental Air Transportation and Western Air Express and is a private express service.

The Sun-Telegraph placed newspapers aboard for the Los Angeles Examiner and Herald and sent copies to William Randolph Hearst and Arthur Brisbane at San Simeon, Cal. Flowers from Pasadena, Cal., will be shipped to the East regularly over the new line, according to officials. Negotiations are being made with the Westinghouse Company for express shipments.

J. V. Thompson, 77, Spends Day Quietly

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Feb. 16.—J. V. Thompson spent his seventy-seventh birthday yesterday the same as he does every Sunday, he said, by going to church in the morning and remaining at home the rest of the day. The former multi-millionaire, friends say, appears in excellent health, following removal of a cataract from his right eye.

Husband, Diamonds Gone, Wife Asks Aid

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Search was made today for Abraham H. Levy, reported to have disappeared on Saturday with $25,000 worth of diamonds in his pockets. His wife told police she believed he had been kidnaped.

BOOM MACKEY FOR CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Negotiations were reported in congressional circles today as being under way in Philadelphia for the selection of Mayor Harry A. Mackey as a candidate for Congress in exchange for his signing a political truce with the Republican organization of the city.

The proposal, which was said by Philadelphia members of the House to have gained momentum within the last week, involves a successor to George A. Welsh, in case he is appointed to the Federal District Court bench at Philadelphia.

At the last gubernatorial primary and general election Mackey bolted the organization to support Gifford Pinchot, then a candidate for governor against the organization's choice, Francis Shunk Brown.

Tulsa Hotel Blast Kills One Victi

TULSA, Okla., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—A bomb explosion in a downtown hotel was fatal for one man and probably mortally injured another.

Frank Disney, 50, a boilermaker, died several hours after an explosion damaged the third floor of the Lynn Hotel. Police believed labor disturbances were responsible for the blast.

DOOMED MAN LOSES APPEAL

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The State Supreme Court today denied a writ of habeas corpus sought in the case of Emory Stevens, Logan County, sentenced to be hanged Friday night at the State Penitentiary at Moundsville.

Stevens originally was sentenced to be hanged on January 23, along with William Claude Adams, convicted in Mingo County in the slaying of three women, but after the premature announcement of his commutation was granted a reprieve. Adams later also was granted a reprieve. Since the reprieve, Stevens has not been confined in the death house.

The petition for the writ, brought as a result of what was termed a premature announcement January 21 that Stevens' sentence had been commuted to life imprisonment, was signed by the condemned man's father.

It was contended that the "commutation became valid and binding" upon the governor.

LILA'S SECOND TRIAL BEGUN

BUFFALO, N. Y., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Lila Jimerson, Indian woman whose trial for murder last year aroused wide interest, was placed on trial a second time today on the same charge.

Lila's indictment for murder grew out of the slaying of Mrs. Clotilde Marchand, first wife of Henri Marchand, an artist employed by the Buffalo Museum of Natural Sciences. Mrs. Marchand was beaten to death with a hammer in her home here last March 6.

An aged Indian woman, Nancy Bowen, also was indicted for the murder. Nancy never has been brought to trial.

Lila was tried but collapsed in court near the close of the trial and was removed to City Hospital, where she was treated for tuberculosis.

Nun, D'Annunzio Heroine, Buried in Blizzard

By ROBERT W. THOMPSON

International News Service.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—A group of Carmelite nuns, lashed by a blizzard, laid away the body of their abbess in a craggy cemetery, 9,000 feet up in the French Alps, a few days ago, and thus closed the epilogue to one of the great romances of Gabriel D'Annunzio.

In a storm-swept grave lies the once Marquise di Rudini Carlotti, daughter of the late former Premier Marquis Antonio di Rudini, and wife of a multi-millionaire.

Scarcely more than a child when her family took her to Rome from Palermo, she soon became the toast of the capital and her dark beauty, it is recalled, nearly drove D'Annunzio mad in despair of love.

The impassioned poet elevated her to the highest pinnacle of his imagination, extolling her in verse after verse and immortalizing his conception of her in a novel, "La Dama del Garda."

She married at the age of 17 and the successful suitor was Marquis di Carlotti. As a marquise she continued to hold the melight of Europe as a sportswoman and an Amazon.

It has always been presumed that the death of her father in 1908 and the suicide of her brother, Deputy Carlo di Rudini, shortly afterward, caused the marquise to take the rigid vows of the Carmelite order. She began 20 years of abnegation and self effacement by giving $5,000,000, all she possessed, to charities.

Writer of Dreyfus Play Horsewhipped by Woman

PARIS, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Mlle. Esterhazy, daughter of one of the principals in the world-famous Dreyfus affair, came to the aid of her father's reputation today and allegedly struck a blow with a horsewhip in his behalf.

Her victim was the dramatist, Jacques Richepin, adapter of a German play dealing with the Dreyfus case now playing at a boulevard theater.

The dramatist denied she struck him, but police said Mlle. Esterhazy told them she used a whip. She was ejected from the dramatist's home and arrested. She later was released.

The reference was to a charge, partly substantiated, that Maj. Esterhazy was guilty of selling French secrets to the German military attache in Paris in 1894, an offense for which another French soldier, Alfred Dreyfus, was convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

After world-wide agitation the case was reviewed, and Dreyfus was released, serving gallantly in the last war.

Electric Charges, Bus Fares Suggested for Inquiry: Governor Will Testify

cause the people have seen the Senate reject the Moore resolution which provided for a searching probe by representatives of both houses and the consuming public.

"It is also because the people have seen the investigation intrusted to your sub-committee, the majority of which is universally believed to be favorable to the utilities.

'INQUIRY RESTRISTED'

"Furthermore, it is because the people have seen adopted by your committee a plan of investigation so carefully restricted that under its wording any serious inquiry is highly unlikely."

ASSAILS WORDING

Gov. Pinchot declared that the resolution creating the Earnest committee was so worded that it might easily rule out questions aimed to ascertain whether utility rates are fair or reasonable, whether the service is adequate, whether the stock is watered and numerous other questions pertaining to financing, operation and construction.

The 11 questions he put forward for investigation were:

"1—Why does the electrical company in Worcester, Mass., importing its coal over 400 miles, charge a 5-cent rate to domestic consumers, while the people of Pennsylvania, living close to the coal fields, pay from 50 to 100 per cent more; for example, Pittsburgh, 7 cents; Philadelphia, 7½ cents; Erie, 8 cents; Harrisburg and many other cities 10 cents?

"2—Why do the people of Pittsburgh pay 25 cents for a bus ride for which the charge in other places is 10 or 15 cents?

"3—Why have the people of Jamestown, N. Y., just outside our border, been paying 4 cents for domestic lighting, when many of our people pay from two to three times as much?

"4—How many million dollars are the people of Pennsylvania required to pay the public utilities each year beyond a fair return on the money actually invested?

OUTSIDE OWNERSHIP

"5—Is it true that power and light utilities of Pennsylvania are owned outside the state to such extent that one man in New York controls the electricity supplied to one-third of our commonwealth?

"6—Do public utilities in Philadelphia give their construction work to political contractors without competitive bids on the notoriously expensive and unbusinesslike cost plus basis, and if so, why?

"7—Have water companies, as at Gettysburg and Hanover, been allowed by the Public Service Commission to get by with equipment so defective as to endanger public safety and public health?

"8—Has the Public Service Commission allowed water rates already profitable to be raised still higher immediately after the sale of Pennsylvania water companies, such as the Scranton-Springbrook Water Company, to New York interests?

"9—What efforts were made during the last campaign to force employes of the Pennsylvania Railroad to vote for the candidates supported by W. W. Atterbury, president of the road?

INTIMATES COERCION

"10—What coercion was applied to business men during the campaign by railroad officials in towns dependent on the railroad for their prosperity.

"11—What part did officials, lobbyists or other representatives of public utilities take in the election of the president pro tempore of the Senate, and which of them were present in the State Capitol on the day of such election?"

The General Assembly reconvenes tonight at 9 o'clock and it was expected that tonight's session would see another legislative fight over the question of the investigation of the Public Service Commission. This was expected to develop when the Turner resolution is called up in the House. The resolution would place the House on record as approving the investigation of the Public Service Commission and the utilities' political activities by the Senate and would recommend an appropriation to cover the cost of the inquiry.

Last week the House passed the Moore investigating resolution by a vote of 121 to 70, but it was generally predicted that the vote on the Turner resolution tonight would be closer. When the Moore resolution reached the Senate, it was "pickled" in committee.

Frank R. Phillips, senior vice president of the Philadelphia Company, told of the Governor's questions on Pittsburgh's electricity and bus rates, said:

"The Philadelphia Company has no statement to make, but will be glad to furnish any information to the Earnest Committee, if requested."

PRISON REFORM NEAR SOLUTION IN NEW YORK

Noted Penologist Reviews Failures of Old System, Plans to End Its Evils

By SAMUEL A. LEWISOHN

Chairman ... Prison Administration ...

NEW YORK, Feb. 16. In the past ... the theory ... battleship ... communities ... strength. Consequently ... enormous, forming ... of granite ... steel. So ... forgetting ... went on ... walls.

But the ... In spite of ... tures we ... lem." There ... sporadic ... and the ... monsense ... ingly important.

Was the ... effective? ... prisons ... form? ...

PRISONERS COME BACK

In thinking ... prisoners ... remember that a large ... men and women who ... sentenced to prison ... come back to society.

It would ... be better ... was directed ... of the prisoner ... the building ... to hold him.

The tendency ... human material ... prison less ... useful to the community rather than making the prison more terrible and secure.

In this spirit we have tackled a problem which for years has been neglected and which cried to the heavens for adjustment and correction.

If the prisoner must come back to society, as eventually he must, what is to be done?

It has been found that a modern program of classification is vitally necessary. It has also been found that non-bastile housing for the better class of prisoners accomplishes three things. Greater economy for society, greater security for society and the salvaging of human material which in the past we have been in the habit of considering as hopeless.

SOCIETY'S SAFETY

Society's safety depends not only upon granite blocks and intricate locking systems—it depends none the less upon the real intelligent, scientific influence exerted upon the criminal with the view of ultimately making him a safe and useful member of society.

We have come to realize that we cannot with safety nor humanity lock a man in an iron fortress and rub our hands complacently and feel that a problem has been solved.

To forget the question of the prisoner's ultimate rehabilitation is to act like the proverbial ostrich.

Prison reform we have found is not solely a humanitarian program. The very security of society depends upon it. It is a practical question and sentimental theorizing on the one hand and vicious cruelty on the other are utterly useless.

Must the old cell-block system go?

It has been found that for a certain proportion of prisoners no adequate substitute has yet been discovered for the cell block.

SMALLER PRISONS

But for a large number of prisoners experience has already indicated that it is safer for the community and more constructive socially to house these prisoners in moderate sized prisons without walls manned by high grade personnel.

These structures are called medium security prisons. Aside from the fact that they are less oppressive the smaller capacity of such prisons make it possible to give closer attention to the training of the individual prisoner.

It is well to remember that when the prisoner enters the average prison he feels he is of necessity compelled to undergo readjustment that will either make a useful citizen of him or return him to society vicious and vengeful.

In his new prison environment he is compelled to adjust himself from the code of the civilian to the code of the criminal from the civil code to the criminal code.

It is at this point that the danger arises.

We in New York state realize that to carry out the plan of housing prisoners in smaller and less guarded prisons there must be facilities for classifying prisoners.

OUTSIDE WORK

It has been found that the housing of certain prisoners in these prisons without walls has been very successful. At Great Meadow and Attica some of the prisoners work on farms outside of the prison proper.

Let us take a concrete case. Let us assume that a young man is a first offender. He is a young man, not hopeless.

In the past we took this young man and herded him together with hardened criminals, he lived in the cell block under depressing routine, he associated with men who were utterly lost to society.

What we propose to do now is to take this young man and place him in a medium security prison where he will associate with men who are not fundamentally and basically dangerous to society. He will work outdoors under less repressive and repressive than is the case in the maximum security prison.

The medium security prison provides single rooms for inmates instead of steel cages; it is well guarded at night and the windows are protected to make escape difficult, but there is no wall surrounding the building. The exercise yard for the prisoners is inclosed by what is known as a cyclone fence, in place of a wall.

CANTONMENT TYPE

We have found that there is still another type of prison which will do much toward rehabilitating the better risk of prisoners.

This prison is the minimum security institution. It is similar to the housing conditions at road and reforestation camps and resembles very closely an army cantonment.

Only prisoners who can be trusted to the highest extent are selected for the minimum security type of prison.

The advantages of constructing a new medium security prison will be two-fold. In the first place, it will offer quickly additional facilities for our overcrowded prisons. Secondly, it will afford greater security to society by turning men back to the community less dangerous and more useful.

Everybody admits that we must have more housing provision for those sent to prison. Following the war there has been a notable increase in the number of inmates in our penal institutions and more housing facilities are required. But the paradox of the matter is that in many cases the smaller the expenditure per housing unit, the greater the benefit.

Lavishness of expenditure for housing has been actually harmful for prisoner as well as expensive to society. I am referring in this case to the unendurably durable type of prison construction which has been customary in the past.

MOST ECONOMICAL

In traditional quarters the idea has been current that a prison must be like a public monument—but in the long run the smaller type of prison, the medium security prison with its smaller personnel and closer contacts between the warden and his men, will pay dividends in rehabilitated men—and this eventually will prove to be the most economical to society.

We are all agreed that the bastile type of prison, with its repressive atmosphere, must eventually give way to the newer and more scientific type of prison which I mention here.

In addition, we realize the pressing necessity for ending the overcrowding in Sing Sing, Auburn, Attica, Elmira and our other large penal institutions.

No discussion of New York's prison system would be complete without a few words on the parole system.

What is the foundation of the parole idea?

The foundation is the idea that legal restraints are not as potent in preventing crime as the strengthening of family and community controls. In the case of a very large number of criminals, the difficulty has been that the fabric of these controls have become weak.

It is the delicate job of the parole officer to attempt to repair this fabric.

End of Walled Prison Dream of Roosevelt

New York state is about to put into effect a program that will replace cruelty with sanity, hatred with science.

In the following article Samuel A. Lewisohn, industrial magnate and penologist, chairman of the commission to investigate prison administration and construction for New York state, discusses the new attitude toward the potential enemy of society.

Gov. Roosevelt's program includes:

Abolition of most of the state's walled prisons.

Segregation of first and youthful offenders.

The creation of a board of scientists—doctors, psychiatrists, psychologists, penologists to determine what treatment the prison shall receive.

The program embraces the following projects:

Sing Sing—Will remain a walled prison, more spacious quarters, reduction of overcrowding.

Meadow Brook—For the more tractable prisoners, outside work on farms, putting the higher type of prisoner on his honor not to escape.

Attica—Pending the construction on the new "medium security" prison, first offenders will be segregated from hardened criminals and put to work outside of the prison under intelligent, considerate keepers.

Auburn and Dannemora—Will remain walled prisons; segregation of hopeful prison material pending the construction of the new prisons; reduction of prison population; more recreation facilities.

Elmira — Separation of first offenders from "repeaters"—reduction of reformatory population—withdrawal of tractable prisoners to the new institutions as soon as they are completed.

In all prisons and reformatories—The creation of joint boards of business men and scientists with the view of rehabilitating first and second offenders.

WASHINGTON ALMOST UPSETS O.G.'s APPLECART

RIPLEY GETS LOW-DOWN ON CAPITAL'S CIGARETTE PREFERENCES

By ROBERT RIPLEY, Creator of "Believe It or Not"

It is easy to start an argument in Washington.

I stopped off there the other day to take a poll of the city's cigarette taste. As usual, I masked the four leading cigarettes with black bands . . . and then asked 874 smokers to pick out the cigarette that tasted best.

Did those famous statesmen give OLD GOLD the same rousing majority it has won in other cities? No, folks, they did not.

The score was: OLD GOLD, 259; Brand X, 202; Brand Y, 224; Brand Z, 189.

Which goes to show . . . that not even Congressional blocs can block the nation's verdict that O. G. is the most appealing cigarette . . . easier on the throat.

THE BEST PLACE TO SHOP, AFTER ALL

NEW Goods at Lower Prices

The 82nd Anniversary Sale, which just closed, showed the way. It prepared the public for lower prices on first quality merchandise of Horne standard.

While the Anniversary Sale presented better-than-normal values, it served to demonstrate the attitude of this store towards the new economic conditions, and its determination to lead the way in the establishment of lower price levels based on present markets.

Spring has arrived at Horne's. From top to bottom of the store, new merchandise holds forth in every department at new prices, which will prove as welcome a surprise to customers as did the Anniversary offerings.

Newness, charm, novelty, taste, dependability and satisfaction are the dominant appeals of Horne merchandise, made more appealing than ever—and more available to a larger number—by the radically lowered prices of the present season.

THE STORY OF THE NEW MILLINERY IN ORIGINAL PARIS HATS

The whimsical ways in which Agnes uses flowers, and makes ostrich feathers simulate them . . . The lilt of Molyneux's brims . . . A thousand tiny, pink forget-me-not petals in a toque by Mademoiselle Marthe, the newest of the haute modistes . . . Patou's harking back to the militaire, in his rough-straw bicornes.

. . . And thus, on and on, runs the story of the recent Paris Openings, from which our Millinery Buyer recently returned, revealed by showings of original models in the Modern Salon, tomorrow.

Molyneux gives a challenging, new lilt to the brim of a fine, brown starched linen hat, and then temporizes by the addition of an exquisitely fine patterned veil.

The Redingote

In Models That Make It a Versatile New Fashion

We believe that one of the best things about the new redingote fashion is the versatility it can give the wardrobe—that is, if the coat is well tailored and neatly finished so it can be combined with other dresses, and the dress so designed that it is complete without the coat . . . Smart models in the Women's Finer Dress Section and the Misses' Shop have been made to conform exactly to this idea.

They have coats of silk crepe or sheer woolens in black, navy blue, or brown; and dresses of printed silks in bright or soft colorings, or (in women's models) dresses of pastel-tinted silks.

(Right, above) A woman's model with coat of heavy, rich canton crepe in brown, the frock in varying shades of brown and beige with flowers centered with chartreuse green . . . Also to be had in other color combinations. $39.50.

(Right, below) A miss' redingote of sheer black wool crepe, with long-sleeved silk frock in red patterned with black, gray and white. $25.

Cornell Dean Addresses Women

In her talk on "Sharing the World" before the local branch of the American Association of University Women on Saturday, Miss R. Louise Fitch said the first step towards the ability to share was a knowledge and understanding of what you have to share. Miss Fitch, who is dean of women at Cornell University, urged a fuller understanding of America by Americans that they may be better able to interpret their country to others.

She mentioned some of the "differences" to be found in the United States, citing a few spots where no English is spoken; the difference between the far South and the Northwest; a college where Psalms were the only permitted form of singing, even at Christmas, and another where chapel is compulsory and no student is allowed off the campus unchaperoned.

The different interpretations by the destructionist, constructionist and instructionist of the word international leaves one in a puzzled state much like the woman who was afraid to drink coffee lest she start a revolution in Brazil, Miss Fitch remarked. She advocated stressing mentality less and social qualities and adaptability more.

Several foreign countries—Germany, Italy, Russia, France, Czecho-Slovakia and Jugo-Slavia—were represented at the luncheon of more than 300 covers in the Hotel Schenley, the last two by their Pittsburgh consuls, Dr. Giovanni Giurato and K. Unkovich. All of these spoke upon request of the president, Mrs. R. D. McKelvey. Mrs. William Reed Thompson, life member of the organization, gave a witty talk reminiscent of the early days of the association.

Mrs. Edward Tabor in three lovely costumes, Elizabethan, Moyen Age and Czech, gave a recital of folk music, accompanying herself.

One of the most interesting features of the fortieth anniversary celebration held Saturday by the Women's Press Club was the reading from the 32-year-old treasurer's book reminiscent of figures and names which only a few of the present members can recall. The celebration took the form of a candlelight dinner at "The Singing Kettle," the charming little Greenwich Village tea room, on Watson street. The decorations were in the club color, rose pink, and were carried out in original posters, corsages of sweet peas, the confections and candies. There was a birthday cake containing symbolic favors. A contest and fortune telling were the entertainment features, a prize for the former going to the president, Miss Mary L. Hay.

MILLINER PRESENTS CHARMING CREATIONS IN SPRING HATS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—Youthful and useful seems to be the motto of the new spring hats. Not for many seasons do we recall such delightful yet withal sensible hats in the early advance collections. Usually these early models are merely in the nature of an effort to discover just what is likely to intrigue and interest us in a millinery way as the seasons change. And so it is generally much later in the season before the situation definitely clears itself and women indicate clearly their preferences. It would seem that the small wearable hat with ribbon trimming will be to the fore. Brims will be small and draped and hats will hug the head without displaying any inclination to be of the skull-cap type. There will be several new weaves, but these too are in the nature of an experiment. The old standbys will continue to be on the job and will no doubt be much employed. Many hats will ally themselves with grosgrain ribbon, always one of the best of trimmings; but all hats will be overwhelmingly becoming. Which should be good news for all womankind.

* * *

THERE ARE SKETCHES today of two hats that, although early models, are simple, smart and sensible. Both are quite suitable for very early spring days. For the first model Madame Jose has used a new ha fabric called shantung straw. As it is soft and supple, it lends itself well to manipulation and draping. The material is drawn out into points at either side and a moderate one in front also serves to suggest the tricorne, a shape that continues to be frequently seen. A narrow forehead band, just visible in front, is of dark blue grosgrain, while the shantung straw is in a light grayish blue. At one side is a cube shaped pin of dark blue galalith studded with steel heads. In passing may we add that scarcely any hatbox will be without its blue hat next season.

* * *

MADAME JOSE IS ALSO responsible for the other model, which is of golden brown straw lace. The brim is drawn up off the forehead in front and rolled over on itself at the sides. In back it is drawn closer and narrower against the crown. Matching grosgrain ribbon bands the crown and makes a pleated, double fan in back.

Pittsburgher to Marry Miami Beach Girl Tomorrow Night

Although I won't know until a little later all about the wedding tomorrow of Mary Frances Palmer, daughter of the George O. Palmers, of Miami Beach, and Frederick George Bannerot, Jr., son of the F. G. Bannerots, of the Schenley Apartments, in Miami Beach, I've just heard a few more details.

The wedding will take place tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock in the Community Church of the resort. And the bride will wear her mother's wedding gown of old ivory satin and duchess lace, made in the empire mode with a court train and a veil of lace. The attendants will wear cameo pink crepe and shirred tulle evening hats. And they'll carry festoons of flowers. The flower girls, Nancy and Sally Palmer, cousins of the bride, will wear cameo tulle in Kate Greenaway style, and will carry tulle baskets of rose petals.

Mrs. Bascom Palmer will be her niece's matron of honor and Miss Sarah Stewart, of New York, Katherine Swearingen, of Bartow, Fla.; Elizabeth Hardy and Lydia Burwell, of Miami, will be bridesmaids, I might report.

After the ceremony the bride and bridegroom will leave on a Mediterranean cruise.

Pittsburgh folks attending the wedding will include the Frederick George Bannerots, father and mother of the bridegroom; A. C. Cline III, the J. W. Henrys and Frances Henry, the Charles M. Kellys, the junior A. H. Clines, the William Lappes, the C. M. Rudds, Dr. H. H. Williamson.

* * *

News of an engagement which has just reached me will be of interest to many Pittsburgh folks who have met the betrothed. They have frequently been entertained by the Jones and Laughlin families here.

Countess Engaged

The engagement is that of Countess Alice Szechenyi, daughter of the Hungarian envoy extraordinary and minister extraordinary at Washington, Count Laszlo Szechenyi and Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, the former Gladys Vanderbilt, of New York, to Count Bela Hadik, son of Count and Countess John Hadik. Countess Hadik was nee Countess Alexandra Zichy.

PLAN RETREAT FOR LAYMEN

FREEPORT, Pa., Feb. 16.—Nearly 300 men from Freeport and surrounding towns attended a rally and banquet here yesterday in the interest of the laymen's retreat movement being fostered by the Diocesan Union of the Holy Name Society. The banquet was served in St. Mary's School hall by members of Freeport Court, Catholic Daughters of America.

The object of the rally was to arouse interest in the retreats for laymen to be held at St. Fidelis College, Herman, Pa., during the last two weeks of July. Joseph Williams, leader of the retreat movement in the Freeport district, presided. Daniel M. Hammill, of Pittsburgh, was toastmaster, and the address of welcome was delivered by the Very Rev. S. J. Benson, pastor of St. Mary's Church, Freeport.

A musical program was rendered by Joseph Coll, Thomas McConville and F. V. Ganter. Addresses were made by the Rev. James M. Delaney, diocesan director of the Holy Name Society; Father Mitch, district diocesan director; Father Bertrand, retreat director of St. Fidelis College; Father Victor, assistant retreat director; the Rev. M. J. McBurney, of Natrona; Dr. Charles A. Rogers, J. J. McShane, Edward P. Griffin and S. P. Barry, who showed moving pictures taken during a retreat held at St. Vincent's College at Beatty, Pa.

PITT TO BEGIN FALK SCHOOL

Officials of the University of Pittsburgh have announced that construction on the Fanny Edel Falk elementary school will begin before the close of the present school year. A gift of $325,000 for the school was made last year by Mrs. Marjorie Falk Levy and Leon Falk, Jr., in memory of their mother.

The design for the building has been formally accepted and bids are to be taken immediately.

The school, to be operated in conjunction with the school of education of the university, will place the equipment of the school on a level with the best in the country. It will contain a nursery school, a kindergarten, and an elementary school.

The purpose of the school will be to furnish a laboratory in which progressive methods of education may be discovered and tested; to serve as a center for the dissemination of the best methods of teaching in the elementary school; to serve as a model wherein teachers in training may observe expert teaching, and to maintain a school on such a high level that the 200 pupils admitted to it will have unsurpassed educational advantages.

Grabowsky's prices are considerably less for spring

IN TUNE with the recession of prices on all commodities, the fine apparel of this store will be found this spring season at surprisingly lower levels. •• To bring this about, there has been no compromise with the high standards of quality and individuality that have earned for Grabowsky's the fashion-leadership of Pittsburgh.

SUITS for Spring

Forsake tailored severity for softer, more feminine lines

- It is their coats that first meet the eye. The shorter coat has assumed prominence, with the little jacket and the bolero in the forefront.
- Peering from under the jacket is the blouse, sometimes showing through the embroidered eyelets. The blouse is so utterly feminine, from its tucks and scallops to its bows and ties.
- Here are blouses of plain georgettes and crepes, and on the other hand are strikingly coloured prints, ranging all the way from intricate, small designs to the bold patterns of the Indian.
- If the suit is fashioned of an imported woolen, the blouse will likely be of silk, but if a tweed is choosen, the blouse will be a light-weight lace jersey, by Rodier.
- Spring's sunshine foretells the brighter colours . . . limes and tomato, pale blues and unusual reds.

TECH BENEFIT ON FEB. 23

The Women's Scholarship Organization of Carnegie Institute of Technology will give their annual benefit presentation this year at the Alvin Theater the evening of February 23.

Faith Hanna

"Michael and Mary," starring Madge Kennedy, is the play chosen by the organization. New York critics are lavish in their praise of this drama by A. A. Milne. Miss Kennedy, known to theater-goers for her work in "Paris Bound" and "Love in a Mist," has won considerable fame on the screen. Terrence Neil, the English actor, plays opposite her in "Michael and Mary."

The Women's Scholarship Organization is composed of one representative from every activity on the campus. Through its efforts, scholarships are awarded each year to deserving students in Margaret Morrison College and the Art School. Proceeds from an annual theater benefit are used for this purpose. Tickets for the benefit should be ordered directly through the Women's Scholarship Organization.

SYRIA'S BAND TO GIVE PARTY

Syria Temple's Oriental Band will hold a George Washington Birthday party in Syria Mosque Tuesday evening, February 24, when the newly installed sound picture machine will be in use for the first time. Dancing, with music by McKinney's Orchestra, will follow a vaudeville program of sound pictures, musicians and entertainers. Committee chairmen under Illustrious Potentate Thomas M. Heard, Jr., and Joseph W. Philippbar, general chairman, are: Harry H. Roessle, reception; James E. Dobson, entertainment; Elmer P. Wilharm, dance; Henry F. Gilg, music; Alfred H. Meyers, check room and badges; Jacob F. Dorsey, safety; J. Harry Dimling, refreshments; C. P. Leininger, M.D., Red Cross.

Wharton School To Mark 50th Year

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Finance and Commerce, the oldest university school of business in America, will be celebrated next month.

The anniversary celebration will be held in conjunction with the annual Wharton Alumni Institute of Business to be conducted on March 26, 27 and 28.

Woman Paroled On Rum Charges

Mrs. Mary Mayer, 29, was placed on probation for two years by Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker, when she pleaded guilty of selling and possessing liquor and maintaining a common nuisance at 805 Braddock avenue, East Pittsburgh. She told the court her husband is dead and she has several children dependent upon her.

Forfeiture of Rum Sought By U. S.

A forfeiture libel against 240 gallons of moonshine whisky was filed in Federal Court by Robert S. Krause, deputy prohibition administrator. The liquor was seized, according to the libel, from two buildings on Boyce street, and from an automobile being driven by Mike Mirasole, on January 6.

FUND COUNCIL TO MEET

The work of the Welfare Fund in dealing with the welfare problems of the community during 1930 will be reviewed at the annual meeting of the Welfare Fund Council today at 4 p. m. in the William Penn Hotel.

The report of Wilbur F. Maxwell, executive secretary, will outline the growth of the unemployment relief problem, and the efforts of welfare agencies to meet needs arising from the emergency. Last year, agencies in the Welfare Fund exceeded their budgets by some $70,000. The increase in expenditure was almost entirely in the field of family welfare and relief, and was caused in the main by unemployment needs. The Welfare Fund was, however, able to close the year without a deficit, owing to the co-operation of all its agencies in helping to meet the situation. This year, estimates have already been exceeded by some $40,000 and the Welfare Fund is facing the possibility of ending the year with a deficit because of the efforts of its agencies to carry the burden of unemployment needs.

Reports of various committees and of the board of directors will be heard today. Included in the business will be the election of seven members to the board of directors to take the place of members whose terms expire at this time. Nominees for these posts are G. G. Coolidge, A. Rex Flinn, Howard Heinz, John Hoehn, F. C. Irish, Mrs. John W. Lawrence, F. A. Leovy, William S. Moorhead, A. K. Oliver and W. B. Trainer. From these nominations seven board members will be elected for a term of three years.

Memorial Service For Dead of U. R. R.

A memorial service for deceased members of the Veteran Employes Association of the Union Railroad and the Union Welfare Association will be held at the Scott High School auditorium, Bell avenue, North Braddock, Pa., on February 22, at 7:30 p. m. The Rev. Dr. John Franklin Troupe, of the Second Presbyterian Church, Wilkinsburg, will deliver the address. The musical part of the program will be rendered by the Braddock Male Chorus.

HOLLYWOOD AND NEW YORK CHAT ALONG WITH REVIEWS AND STAGE NOTES

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 16.

A last minute break gave Marion Marsh a chance at film fame, and now, at John Barrymore's request, she is to play opposite him for the second time in "The Genius."

A pretty blonde, with a sweet expression, Marion was dupping along at Warner's almost unnoticed when she got a chance to appear in the local stage version of "Young Sinners." When the reviews came out the next morning, Warners suddenly realized they had been overlooking a possible star.

No sooner was the run of the play ended than she found herself on the way to stardom. After hundreds of other actresses had been tested Warners decided to cast her as Trilby in "Svengali," and, even though the old melodrama has been altered to make it a starring vehicle for Barrymore, the part is an important one.

John Barrymore

Barrymore's request that she continue on with him in "The Genius" is the best answer as to her ability. She has arrived.

GOLDWYN SIGNS ANOTHER

Another celebrity, Herman Shumlin, is to come to Hollywood at the instance of Samuel Goldwyn.

Shumlin, producer and director of the current Broadway hit, "Grand Hotel," has a long term contract to serve as supervising executive in the Goldwyn production staff, which is headed by Arthur Hornblow Jr.

Prior to "Grand Hotel," Shumlin directed "The Last Mile" and "Celebrity." He was general manager for Jed Harris during the run of "Broadway."

LATEST GOSSIP

Charles Richards, casting director at Pathe, and Dorothy Burgess, cinema and stage actress, apparently have not renewed their options on each other . . . The rumors of Charles Farrell's marriage to Virginia Valli are said to have brought down numerous protests from his fans . . . George Gershwin and Guy Bolton have finished writing their Fox musical, "Delicious," and will leave here soon. The picture will be produced in the late spring with Janet Gaynor starring and David Butler directing . . . Dorothy Mackaill is vacationing at Arrowhead . . . Joan Bennett has taken a house at the extreme end of Coldwater Canyon, back of Beverly Hills. Her nearest neighbor is blocks away.

Upon fuller consideration the parts have been assigned to Jack Mulhall and Noel Francis, the latter a newcomer to Radio Pictures. She formerly was a singer and dancer under contract to Fox.

Lilyan Tashman is another in the new cast of "Waiting at the Church."

MEXICAN BANDIT ACTS LIKE PLAYBOY IN THE HARRIS

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"Captain Thunder" is the new photoplay in the Harris. It looks like the old drama, "The Bad Man," in disguise. And a bad disguise at that!

We aren't able to figure out whether the movie-makers mean it as serious stuff or whether it is supposed to be a burlesque on the caballero theme. But, either way, it isn't anything.

The hero is a Mexican bandit who acts like a smalltown playboy. He steals the dresses right off pretty girls, he allows himself to be captured so a young Romeo may collect a reward and he shoots a man to accomodate a lady.

Another absurd character is the chief of police—or whatever such officials are in Mexico. He's a boastful goof who always gets the worst of it in the best comic strip manner.

The cast includes Victor Varconi, Fay Wray, Don Alvarado and John St. Polis. And we feel sorry for Mr. St. Polis. An actor of his ability surely deserves a better break.

The stage has five acts of vaudeville, including the Dixie Four, Negro dancers; Fulton and Parker, who sing, and Hurst and Vogt, comics.

New Swanson Film Titled 'Indiscreet'

"Indiscreet" is the title of the Gloria Swanson film now being made at the United Artists studio in Hollywood, under direction of Leo McCarey and with Ben Lyons, Barbara Kent, Monroe Owsley and Arthur Lake in the supporting cast. It is an original story by DeSylva, Brown and Henderson, but not a musical film.

Support

Bebe Daniels plays the principal feminine supporting role in the Douglas Fairbanks film, "Reaching for the Moon," which comes to the Penn Friday.

HERSHOLT IS AGAIN IN NOVARRO PICTURE

Helen Chandler, stage actress, has the leading feminine role. Others in the cast are Jean Hersholt, who played so successfully with Novarro in "Old Heidelberg"; Kent Douglass, William Bakewell, Cliff Edwards, Sumner Getchell, C. Aubrey Smith, Russ Powell, Zelda Sears, Carmelita Geraghty and Clyde Cook.

Incidental music for the new production is by Oscar Strauss. Cyril Hume wrote the dialogue and Ruth Cummings is credited with the adaptation.

Miss Shearer Film Has Two Hamiltons

Two Hamiltons in the same picture keeps the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer casting office on the jump to keep track of them. The Hamiltons, Neil and Hale, both are appearing in support of Norma Shearer in "Strangers May Kiss."

Things I Never Knew Till Now

(But which you knew all along!)

That the largest telephone booth ever built was placed in the White House for the use of President Taft.

That Lincoln was shot at one night in August, 1864, the bullet boring a hole through his silk hat.

That when a Chinese gal gets sealed, her attendants usually are the oldest and ugliest women in the neighborhood.

That the letter Z begins no word of English origin.

That a fellow by the name of Sherlock was an actual acquaintance of A. Conan Doyle, the author using it because he liked him.

That at Donner, California, the average snowfall is 68 feet a year—the largest in the world. (See "Human Geography.")

That Harper's mag was originally intended as a house organ, refusing all outside advertising. In the early 70s it turned down an $18,000 contract from the Howe Sewing Machine Co.

That there are 21 parks in Los Angeles, if you please.

That the first edition of Fitzgerald's Omar Khayyam was a pronounced failure. It was relegated to a book-stall at a penny a copy, and couldn't sell even then!

That the St. John's River in Florida is not a river, at all, sir. I mean madam. It is part of the Atlantic.

That Henry Hudson did not discover the Hudson River, the honors belong to Giovanni de Verrazzano, who was there 90 yrs before.

That those beards you see portrayed on King Tut and other Pharaohs were falseys. They were attached to the chin with string.

That Edmund Ruffin, of Redmoor, Va., at the age of 67, fired the first shot of the Civil War.

That the youngest soldier in the Civil tiff was John L. Clem, of Newark, Ohio, who killed a man at 11, and was a sergeant at 12.

That all American trotters trace their descent to a British thoroughbred named Messinger, who was imported in 1788.

That lyrics cannot be registered in the Copyright Office unless such words have already been published either separately as a leaflet or as a contribution to a periodical.

That magazine advertising did not originate until Feb. 1860, when The Atlantic Monthly printed the first ad.

That the most valued of silver dollars among coin collectors is that of 1804. Only twenty pieces were coined.

That the Gulf of California was a great pearl fishery 200 years ago when they were placed in baskets and sold by the bushel.

That Beau Brummel, the dandy, broke off his engagement, when he saw his fiancee eat cabbage for the first time.

That the melody of "Home, Sweet Home" was written by Henry Bishop. It was one of six numbers in his opera, "Clari, the Maid of Milan."

That Caesar Rodney's horse-ride was inestimably more important than Paul Revere's. Rodney's ride, you have probably forgotten by now, secured the adoption of the Declaration of Independence.

That smoke, not nicotine, is what irritates the throat.

That Hoyle's rules on poker are not so hot as the treatise on that game written by Robert G. Schenck, who was the U. S. Ambassador to Great Britain in the 70s. Give a look, then.

That much of the so-called Russian caviar is taken from sturgeon caught in the Delaware River and Lake Superior.

That George Bernard Shaw has had publishers here and abroad suppress a book dealing with his family, yet in the preface to the new Definite edition of his works, he says his old man did some fancy drinking.

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

From audience-reaction standpoint, Glenn and Jenkins, blackface jesters, in their old skit, "Working for the Railroad," stand first on the bill of Davis vaudeville which headlines Miss Patricola and includes Signor Friscoe and his marimba band, and the Five Jansleys. The screen feature is Edmund Lowe in "Men on Call."

Miss Patricola, one-time Davis favorite when the two-a-day was going strong, sings four songs of ascending temperature, reaching the torchiest degree in one about a Hahlem "hot-cha-cha." They are not family-theater material, as Miss Patricola's encore chart probably apprises her.

JUST AS OF YORE

Glenn and Jenkins, evidently a last-minute booking, wield their floor brushes as of yore and cause many laughs with their bickering chatter. Signor Friscoe's marimba artists, six of them besides himself, please with their selections, the best of which is "Humoresque," which is not improved by the chestnutty "comedy" reference in a request by a "plant" that it be played.

The Jansleys are a fivesome, two of whom lie on their backs and twirl the others in the air with their feet, making them human barrels. The act has speed and novelty to recommend it, and the audience liked it.

LOVE AND COAST GUARDS

"Men on Call" mixes up love and Coast Guard heroism, and Coast Guard Lowe has to go through roaring flames of a ship fire and get into a hospital for the final clinch with the girl he might have clinched any time his brain wasn't so dead as it was most of the time.

The fire isn't convincing enough to be thrilling or quite so plainly moviesque as to be funny. So it is just disappointing. Mae Clarke plays the girl.

ED WYNN TO GIVE US OUR ONLY OPENING

Fresh from a long run in Chicago, and preceding a Boston engagement, "Simple Simon," the Ziegfeld musical comedy frolic starring Ed Wynn, "the perfect fool," comes to the Shubert Alvin tonight as the only new show in town this week. Harriet Hoctor is featured in the big cast.

Bertha, the maid in "It's a Wise Child," will be acted by Mabel Kroman in the George Sharp production of the play in the Pitt opening tonight. Nina Weston originated the role, which is of the kind Miss Kroman enjoys playing.

Seats are on sale in the box office of the Nixon for the new musical comedy, "Making Mary," which will have its premiere in the Nixon next Monday evening, February 23. The piece is scheduled to open in the New Amsterdam Theater, in New York, after the Pittsburgh engagement.

Lily Damita Cast In 'Put on the Spot'

Lily Damita will have the leading feminine role in "Put On the Spot" for Radio Pictures. Ricardo Cortez will play opposite her in this original story by Jack Lait. Harry Joe Brown will direct "Put On the Spot."

Plays Lead

Ed Lowry to Keep Previous Contract

Since the first announcement last week that Ed Lowry would leave the Stanley Thursday, John H. Harris, zone manager for the Warner Brothers in Pitsburgh, reports he has received hundreds of letters and telephone calls as to why Lowry is leaving.

Because of a previous contract, Mr. Harris stated, Lowry must return to St. Louis, where he was before coming to Pittsburgh.

COLBY PREDICTS TRADE CHANGES

Readjustment rather than merely a revival of business as the outcome of the depression from which the United States is rapidly emerging, is the expectation of Safford K. Colby, vice president of the Aluminum Company of America, who was heard last night in an address from WCAE. He said:

"We must expect further fundamental changes. We must expect to revise our thinking and our working methods, but I do not believe we need expect any material reduction in the American standard of living."

Commenting upon the barometer of business conditions in many trades and fields offered by the dealings with the Aluminum Company, Colby remarked that the automobile field is making heavy demands, and likewise the traction companies, the aircraft manufacturers, and that the sale of cooking utensils in December of 1930 far surpassed the sales of the same month the previous year.

Faith in America, Colby said, has the Aluminum Company building a new plant at Massena, N. Y., keeping 3,000 men at work for a year.

100 Scouts Offer Blood to Save Girl

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Little Maggie Sharp, an orphan who could not afford to pay for blood transfusions, was dying for lack of red corpuscles. A call went out to Boy Scouts headquarters. More than 100 boys volunteered. Maggie is recovering.

Nieces, Nephews Share in Estate

Mrs. Francis Foiley, of 563 Seventh avenue, left an estate of $10,300 to several nieces, nephews and her brother, George Kim, in her will probated today. A nephew, Fred Kim, and Attorney William McDowell, were named executors.

16 Face Deportation After Raid on Dance

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Sixteen men and two women, arrested at a Finnish Club dance were held at Ellis Island today for deportation proceedings. Federal agents questioned 350 dancers after invading the club.

SCOUTS SHOWN COACH MODEL

More than 250 boys of the Guyasuta District Boy Scout Council yesterday attended the exhibition of the model Napoleonic Coach of the Fisher Body Craftsman Guild at the Glenshaw Community Presbyterian Church, the headquarters of Troop 184, of Glenshaw.

According to Scoutmaster H. Clinton Kyle, in charge of the contest in the Glenshaw district, 25 boys have started building the coaches. Yesterday the boys were instructed in some of the finer points in the construction of their models.

Today the coach was to be displayed at four public schools at Wheeling, W. Va., and later in the day at Washington, Pa. A four-year university scholarship, valued at $5,000, will be awarded to the winner of the contest.

Rookie Policeman Captures 100 As Auto Backfires

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—If a detective squad hadn't arrived when it did, Policeman Carl Alfredson would have arrested the whole South Side.

Carl, a rookie, was homeward bound late Saturday. Nearing the Englewood Police Station, he heard shots. Then he saw a number of men hurry into a pool hall. His suspicions were confirmed. It was a riot.

Hotfooting it into the pool room Carl ordered "hands up." Close to a hundred habitues of the place were forced to line up.

Then detectives arrived and questioned him instead of his captives—and it turned out that the shots were automobile backfires.

AIR FLEET ENDS NIGHT FLIGHT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Nineteen Army planes arrived at Bolling Field last night after a two and one-half hour flight from Selfridge Field, Michigan, to test the practicability of moving an air squadron at night.

It was the first cross-country night flight by an Army air fleet. The return trip will be made tonight.

The planes arrived at 9 p. m. and officials said the trip was without incident.

Residents of McDonald and nearby towns last night reported seeing the fleet of planes pass over their districts. They described it as an unusual sight. Each ship bore green and red lights, and when seen at McDonald were flying closely together.

CANADIAN RUM CREW HELD

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—A new problem today faced diplomatic and Coast Guard officials as 11 men from the crew of the Canadian ship Algie were held here.

The men chose the chance of arrest rather than death when their ship sprang a leak and foundered in Long Island Sound. Coast Guards rescued the crew after they sounded an S. O. S., but shortly after arrested the men when they claimed 3,500 cases of liquor were found on the ship. The liquor was estimated to be worth $75,000.

The Canadians demanded their release as survivors of a wrecked vessel. The captain of the boat claimed he was bound for Bermuda and steamed toward New York only when the ship started to leak.

WESTINGHOUSE IN EXPORT PACT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The General Electric Company, of Schenectady, N. Y., and the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa., have formed the Electric Apparatus Association, to export electrical and other apparatus.

Papers were filed by the new company with the Federal Trade Commission today under the Export Trade act, known as the Webb-Pomerene law. The association will maintain offices at 120 Broadway, New York.

Provisions of the act grant exemption from the anti-trust laws to an association entered into and solely engaged in export trade, providing there be "no restraint of trade within the United States, or restraint of export trade of any domestic competitor, and with the further prohibition of any agreement, understanding, consipracy or act which shall enhance or depress prices or substantially lessen competition within the United States or otherwise restrain trade therein."

Judge to Address Social Federation

Judge C. W. Hoffman, for 15 years a member of the Juvenile Court bench of Cincinnati, will address members of the Pittsburgh Federation of Social Agencies at a luncheon and open forum Wednesday noon in the William Penn Hotel. He will talk on the proposed bill to raise the Juvenile Court age in Pennsylvania from 16 to 18 years.

Wreckers Razing Downtown Building

Wreckers have arted to raze the three-story brick building owned by the Koppers Company at Bigelow boulevard and Seventh avenue. The site, including 20,000 square feet, will be used for a parking lot. The building is known as the former Oliver S. Hershman property.

Grocer Loses Life In Eighth Holdup

DETROIT, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Resistance to the eighth holdup man to enter his store in two years last night cost the life of Ferris Williams, grocer, but he brought about the capture of the robber by shooting him in the leg. The holdup man was identified as Chester Majewski.

Trial Marriage Issue Raised by Pastor

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Declaring that Bishop Manning had by "definite implication" accused him of "furthering gross immorality through his advocacy of companionate marriage," the Rev. Eliot White today asked that he be given an ecclesiastical trial.

White, assistant minister of Grace Church, invited former Judge Ben B. Lindsey, of Denver, to address the New York Churchmen's Association, thus starting a chain of events which led to Lindsey's eviction from the Cathedral of St. John the Divine here on December 7.

Society Woman Put On Trial in Slaying

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Mrs. Helene Grant Thornewill, attractive society matron, charged with murdering Leslie A. Thornewill, her wealthy husband, in a scuffle for possession of a revolver, faced trial before Superior Judge Harry C. Lucas here today. Thornewill was shot the night of December 29. In a deathbed statement he declared the shooting was accidental.

Leaves Husband Because He Is Just Ordinary

And as [illegible] things were "better" she thing around.

But when he got his job and they had to sell the bungalow and things [illegible] steadily worse"—that was [illegible] story.

Of course, I didn't really mean to stay as I keeps when she took the baby and came home to [illegible] dad for a little [illegible]. But then she got to thinking it over. And the more she thought the more she wondered why should she bother with trouble when she could take [illegible]. Here today is her conclusion. What do you think of it? Is this what you would do if your man had a bit of trouble going?

"Dear Sally:

"I suppose if you can't help me [illegible] I'm separated from my husband, he wants me to go back to him, and I don't see why I should. It wasn't really a separation, I'll admit in the first place. It was just that I took the baby and went home to dad and mother because Tom lost his job and couldn't find another one and we had to give up the little bungalow we'd picked out and felt so proud of. But after I'd been home a while I got to thinking, and just can't really see any use of going back . . . and maybe having to go through all that again.

An Ordinary Man

"I loved Tom terribly when I married him, and I was so proud of him, and of being married to him, and of my home. But I can see now that I really built up a lot of Tom in my own mind. He isn't nearly so wonderful as my ignorant, girlish fancy painted him. Not that there is anything wrong with him. There isn't. He's one fine chap, except that he is quite ordinary, without any special talents or abilities . . . and I know very well he'll never make any bowling success, or set the world afire as I imagined he would when I fell in love and married him.

"I really did think it was worth it, so long as he was working and we had our home. But when things went wrong and we had to give that up I went home on account of the baby. I didn't want my baby to live just any place, and maybe get sick or something. And since I've been away, I've been thinking things over and trying to be very sensible, and it seems to me that, even though I do care a lot for Tom still it's just no use. After all, I do love my baby, and what more does a woman need?

Thinks of Child

"Of course Tom can't see my point at all. He has another job now, and a fairly good one that would keep us comfortable, but not leaving much margin for saving. And he insists that I'm not treating him right. I know he does love me, but some way his arguments don't convince me. In fact they made me feel irritated at him. Dad and mother have a nice home and I'm the only child and they can take good care of me . . . and the baby. And after all the baby is the one I'm thinking of most. If I do go back to Tom I can't expect dad to help. I know that wouldn't be fair. And I do so want little Tom to have everything.

"Don't you think I'm right? Dad and mother won't advise me. They say this is something I've got to settle without them and. So please help me won't you? I'm pretty well convinced that I'm right . . . but I've got to make Tom understand too, and I don't just know how to do that. ETHEL.

What do I think.

I think you're a piker . . . a lazy, selfish, disloyal, cruel piker. And that's what every decent person will think you are.

That's what your baby will think you are when he grows old enough to realize what you've done. You talk about "doing this for his good." Will it be for his good to know that his mother was a coward? To know that she deserted his father when that father needed her most? What will he think of all other women, with you as an example?

Yes, I know that losing your home was a hard blow, and this world being what it is you may lose it again if things go wrong. But what of it? Life's full of hard knocks for everyone. Is that any reason for lying down and quitting cold?

A Deserter

And, though you don't realize it yet, you're doing more than two-timing Tom, and cheating his baby out of a father and a regular home. You're two-timing yourself. When you married Tom you shouldered certain responsibilities. Those responsibilities weren't merely a job you had to do for Tom. They were a job you had to do for yourself. They were your chance to grow—your chance to become a real woman. When you ran away from those responsibilities you ran away from your own big opportunity to amount to something. You ran back into childhood — into contemptible, dishonest childhood.

And what's more, young lady, you've no right to take that baby from his father. And if you desert your job as wife, you're not fit to raise a son—and the court should take him from you.

Snap out of it, kid! We all have cowardly streaks at times, but we can get over them. Get over yours. Decide to give that baby a real mother, and yourself a square deal. Go back to Tom! Go back to life! Don't make your fine dad and mother realize, with shame, that they raised their girl to be a coward.

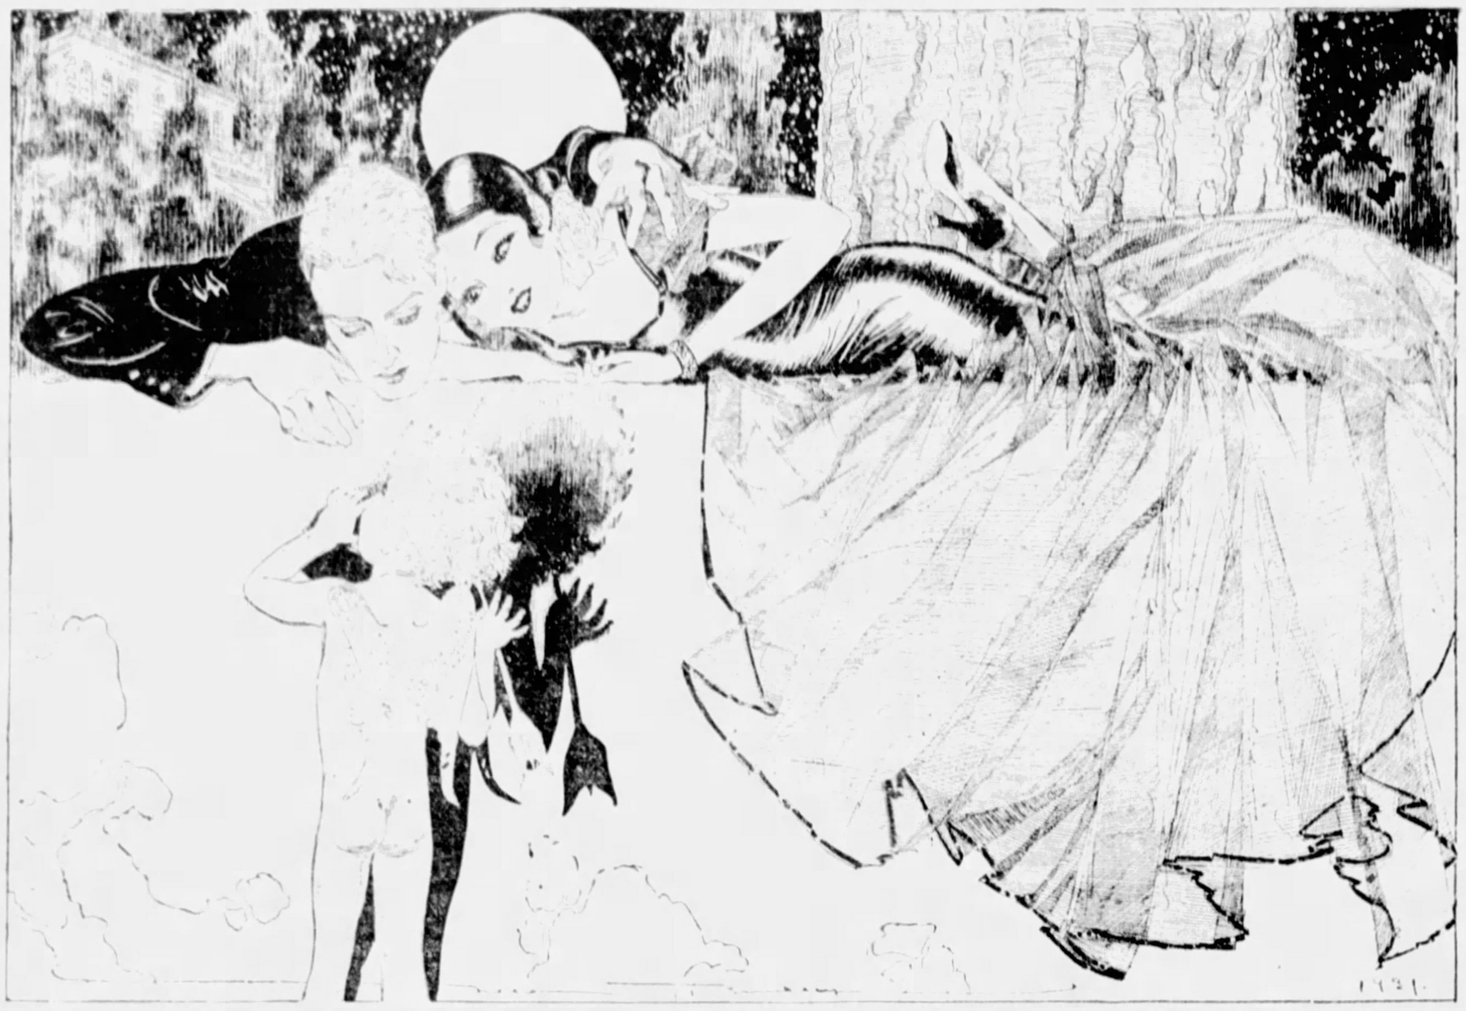
THE WHISPERER

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



"Who can view the ripen'd rose, nor seek to wear it?"

There are so many things fashioned in this world to help the Whisperer along—so many things that speak for him—so many allies, colored to prove his words. When a man and a girl wander farther and farther in the enclosed garden, lured by a will-o'-the-wisp that leads on, they come to the wall where the home garden ends, and the unknown trails that Love travels begin.

And there they hear the Whisperer. And around him the whole world rustles and sparkles and gurgles "yes" to everything he says. The leaves of the trees, fairy-blue in the night, one more beautiful thing in the world—assent. The stars, sparks of white, blue and red fire, jump up and down, wink and whisk out light against a sky-curtain of imperial blue, saying "Yes—yes!" The fountain babbles in silver, adding to the lovely world that Love is painting for the man and the girl—falling strings of diamonds that patter "yes." The whole world of nature backs up the tale of the Whisperer, who, mounted on the back of a winged minion, his right-hand Cupid, stands below the wall; a Sage, a Cynic, an Innocent, a Tempter, but a thing of beauty like the rest of the world around.

He whispers, "Come out into Love's real world. So far you are living in a dream. Join my subjects. There are no bachelors or maiden-ladies in it. Kings and queens, and typists and scholars, soldiers, sailors, bankers, bakers, rich-man, poor-man, artists, all are out of the garden, where you exchange only a smile, a sigh, a kiss and a hand-clasp. Poor Fare! MY subjects have a little house—and maybe a baby or two, and a bit in the bank, I hope! Listen—you may find distress sometimes, for you must take things as they fall, and sometimes they fall askew in this world; and you may find a desert to cross, but OHH—the glory of having each other, the charm of life when two who love each other live it together!

"Come over the wall, my children—and get MARRIED!"

And so young people keep on climbing out of the family garden, where all is safe, to follow the Whisperer over roads that are alternately rosy and rocky.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

How to Keep Well

By DR. COPELAND

Good Lung Action Is Essential to Health.

Do you practice breathing deeply, or are you habitually given to shallow breathing?

Dr. Copeland

There are too many people in this world who do not know how to breathe.

Of course, you know breathing is automatic. It goes on regularly, day and night, just like the ticking of a clock.

The blood circulates through the lungs and around the body three times in about a minute. As it passes through the right side of the heart into the lungs it is dark purple in color. It is saturated with waste products gathered up by the blood in its circuit around the body. As you exhale, or breathe out, these products escape in watery vapor.

When the lungs inhale, or take in air, the wonderful chemical laboratory of the body separates the life-giving oxygen from the air. This oxygen is absorbed through the thin walls of the tiny blood vessels of the lungs. In this way it gets into the general circulation of the blood. At once, there is a change in the blood. It turns from purple color to bright red. It goes from the lungs to the heart, clean and pure as the air breathed.

The purer the blood becomes by flowing through the lungs, the more vitality will a person have. For this reason everyone needs vigorous exercise to increase the lung capacity.

Many cases of lung disease and nose and throat troubles might be averted if more persons would learn the habit of deep breathing. A great deal can be done to improve the health by setting aside a few minutes every day to the practice of slow and deep breathing.

One of the best exercises in the world is walking. Everybody who is able-bodied can take a vigorous walk every day. This is the time to practice deep breathing.

If you live in the city, get out into the parks to walk when you can. Even at best, city air is full of dust and smoke, so it is important as often as possible, to get into the open spaces, out into the country. This is good, both for a change in scene and for one's health. Breathe the pure air of the hilltops or the invigorating sea air as often as you can.

Civilization is such that multitudes of people are herded together in close proximity. That is all the more reason why every room, night and day, should be well ventilated. Let in the fresh air. There is an inexhaustible reservoir of air for all to breathe. It is only by man's ignorance of how he is made and how he should live, or by utter neglect, that he keeps from living as near as possible to Nature, as Nature intended he should.

Answers to Health Queries.

ANXIOUS. Q.—What can be done for snakebite? Is there some simple treatment which can be used, at least until medical aid may be had?

A.—Bites of native snakes are seldom, if ever, fatal, but it is always wise to treat the bite as soon as possible. The poison must be eradicated before it has a chance to get into the general blood supply.

Dicky's Offer of Corsage Places Madge in a Dilemma

I took down the telephone receiver with distinct misgivings. There was no reason why Dicky should telephone, especially when he had promised to be back at four to "give a hand" with the preparations for Mary's party. Had anything happened to upset him? I should soon know, I reflected, when I heard his voice, and I braced myself against possible angry tones. But there was apparently nothing but cordial inquiry in his voice although I wondered if I fancied an undercurrent of excitement, suppressed, but betraying.

"Are you there at last, old dear?" he asked airily. "I've been combing the hotel for you."

"I'm sorry," I said swiftly. "I should have left word at the telephone desk that I would be in the dining room for half an hour, but I forgot it. Mary and I were so engrossed in arranging things with Mr. Seibel."

I purposely dragged in the name of the proprietor of the hotel dining room, along with Mary's. I wanted no chance of his imagining my having a conference with Philip Veritzen.

"Oh! forget that part of it," he said impatiently. "I've something more important on my mind. I meant to ask you this morning. What gown are you going to wear tonight?"

I caught my breath in panic. Not that the query was an unusual one. Dicky always sends me an exquisite corsage bouquet when we are going to any affair requiring such embellishment of a gown. But at this home party for Mary I had not expected him to think of it and thus had not felt the uneasiness at Philip Veritzen's munificent offer which I otherwise should have experienced.

There was but one explanation which I could see, not only for Dicky's query, but also for the undercurrent of excitement which I fancied I detected, beneath his suave inflections. Edith Fairfax must have lost no time in telling him of my employer's plea to be permitted to furnish the corsages for all the women guests. With the fantastic reaction which is anger, he was testing me to see what I would do when confronted with a choice between his flowers and those of my employer.

For a second I did not know at which person I was more angry. Edith for her lack of sportsmanship, or Dicky for the dilemma which he was imposing on me.

I would not give either Edith or Dicky, however, the satisfaction of knowing that I had guessed her tale-bearing. Neither, I said to myself, would I make my final decision about the corsage at this time. It would not financially cripple either Dicky or Philip Veritzen, I told myself grimly, to purchase a single corsage bouquet which might not be worn, and I made my voice carelessly casual as I answered.

"Im not quite sure, it really doesn't matter, you know, but I think the sand color."

I felt like Machiavelli's sister as I uttered the words. For with the desperation of a person at bay, I had thrown up a flimsy defense which yet might by chance serve me.

"The sand color, eh?" Dicky answered, and I fancied that there was relief in his voice. Had he expected me to anticipate possible offer of his flowers with a refusal of them? "All right. I'm sending you a bouquet. Anything particular you'd like?"

"No, thank you," I returned. "I'd rather leave that to you. And it's awfully sweet of you. Remember the decorations are in tones of yellow and orange."

"I'll remember — everything," he said cryptically. "So long. See you about 4."

The receiver clicked, and I hung up my own. But I did not come out of the booth for a full half minute during which I battled myself back to composure, after consigning Edith Fairfax to a half dozen tortures, each more ingenious than the one before it.

"What's the matter, Auntie Marge? Mary asked curiously as I came out of the booth. "You look—queer—somehow—upset."

"I'll tell you in our own apartment," I whispered, and when we reached there I turned to her with a smile which held bitterness as well as amusement.

"I was just paraphrasing your question of a few minutes ago," I told her. "Why is a woman?"

She looked startled, and I saw that for the second she had forgotten her angry query, evidently born of something Noel had said. Then she flushed hotly.

"I was pretty mean to Noel," she admitted. "Anyway, nothing's worth a quarrel with the one you love best in all the world. May I go over to see him?"

I did not answer her for a second. My brain was busy repeating her words. "Nothing's worth a quarrel with the one you love best in the world."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Tuesday, February 17

The sidereal operations for this day point to very important events for those in employment of others or those seeking favors or preferment from those in authority. It would be well to approach these but to undertake other important changes with discretion and sagacity. There is some hazard in change or travel, but opportunities judiciously embraced and engendered should prosper.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a year in which promotion and preferment await them from employers or those in places of authority. While judiciously managed affairs would prosper, yet removal, travel and new projects are on the whole precarious.

A child born on this day should be capable and efficient in the employment of others, but otherwise may be restless, erratic and self-indulgent.

Household Hints

Use a few drops of olive oil in oiling kitchen utensils, such as the food chopper and egg beater. If a drop or so should work into the food it can do no harm.

Milk is an article that one should never try to buy as a bargain. It is a bad investment to buy unbottled milk for anything, even if it is a few cents cheaper. Bottled milk from a reliable dealer is certain to be clean and you don't know a thing about the handling of the milk in the unbottled variety.

My boy never ate between meals until he started school, then naturally he wanted something at recess along with the other youngsters. However, this tiny bite may be nourishing by having graham crackers or homemade cookies on hand and putting one or two in sonny's pocket for the little lunch. Don't give him a penny to buy some cheap candy that will upset his stomach.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

In Response to the Greeting of Introduction

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My friend and I made a sporting wager on a question that we have had friendly arguments on, and we have decided to settle this by leaving it to your judgment.

One of us says that when meeting a young lady, after she has acknowledged the introduction by saying "How do you do?" the young man answers the exact phrase.

The other says that after the young lady has acknowledged the introduction by saying "How do you do?" the young man answers "Very well, thank you. How are you?"

Now, Mrs. Beeckman, who is right, and if neither is right, what is right?

2. Also, what is the correct acknowledgment of an introduction of a young man to another young man?

DICK AND HARRY.

What a responsibility! I wonder what the wager is? Anyway the young man who maintains that the introduced young man says "How do you do?" after the introduction, just as the lady says, "How do you do?" wins. The reason is that this phrase: "How do you do?" is simply the conventional phrase that is always accepted as the correct acknowledgement of an introduction. The person saying it does not, of course, could not, indeed, be particularly interested in how one "does," especially at this short acquaintance. The thing that both are interested in, or should be is in making the most gracious and correct form of acknowledgments, and this is "How do you do?"

For the person to say "Very well, thank you. How do you do?" indicates that he is not "socially accustomed" for he interprets the phrase as being a real question which it is not regarded as being.

2. "How do you do" is the correct phrase for each gentleman to use in acknowledging an introduction to each other.

Over the Telephone

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am in the habit of saying "Yes" instead of "Hello" when answering the telephone. Is this correct? CHARLOTTE.

I suppose it is correct to say "Yes" instead of the conventional "Hello," but to me there are few things so maddening. I cannot explain why, but it just is. I always associate it with people who do not say goodby when they finish talking over the telephone, and curiously enough, it often does coincide. I have never yet heard "Yes" said over the telephone, as the answer for the call, when it has been said with a gracious voice. The two syllables of "Hello" perhaps help to add a graciousness to the voice.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Fussing with pimples, pressing them, irritating them, is bad business. Sometimes they are boils in the making and pressure forces pus into surrounding tissues. Don't do.

Five minutes of brisk exercising every morning are worth gold and rubies. They create a sense of well-being, put a gal on her toes. One movement is enough. Try this: Take the soldier's position, chest high, hips back, ankles five inches apart. Bring hands above the head, pulling in a deep breath and lifting on the toes. Touch the floor without bending the knees, exhaling as the hands go down.

Skin is constantly undergoing a system of renewal and decay. Old scales are fluffing off, new ones appearing. When the surface is chapped there is a state of dermatitis which must be remedied by frequent applications of oils or soothing lotions. If the complexion rebels against soap for the time being, use oatmeal or almond meal, and, dry with gentle pats. Chapped skin won't stand harsh treatment. It gets sore and mad.

Bulging tumtums should be supported with a sersetiet or abdominal band. The more these flabby, flaccid muscles are allowed to sag the more they will lose elasticity and strength. Lie on the back, place a heavy book on the abdomen, inhale deeply through the nostrils and exhale through the mouth.

Do you know that cold wet air, such as flies about this season of the year, is stimulating to the complexion and that the beauty seeker should be out of doors, gathering in free loveliness? Cold and moisture are tonic to the skin. Dryness of the air causes the epidermis to scale; then quantities of cream are necessary to get the cuticle back to normal.

Turkish baths are effective skin beautifiers. Before going into the hot room spread a heavy cream upon face, neck and arms. While in the hot room rub ice over the cream. By giving the cuticle all over the body a good sweating and a thorough soapy scrubbing the skin functions better and a smaller quantity of tissue wastes come out through the sensitive glands of the face, producing blackheads and enlarged pores.

CHAPTER XV.

"Quick, mother," I said, "one of the little pellets, and my dear, devoted, unselfish mother obeyed the doctor's orders and gave the second pellet with her own kind, loving hands.

After that it was easy.

We had no idea what it was I was taking, my mother and I. We thought the little white pills were some sort of miraculous blessing in disguise, and we thanked, not only the good doctor, who had given them to my mother for me, but we thanked the great Giver of all Good, too, for the relief and comfort they brought.

Why, we were so ignorant of the real nature of those harmless little snow white pellets that two or three times, when other girls on the set were tired and suffering from pain or exhaustion, I told them that mother and I had something that would relieve them.

Miss Rubens

I would rather have had my hand cut off at the wrist than to give anyone one of those pellets, if I had had the slightest idea what they were and what they meant.

But I didn't at first.

And after I did know, I was as helpless as a prisoner locked in solitary confinement in the most terrible dungeon under the sun.

I found the way to a complaisant doctor, who made no attempt to talk medicine to me.

He just talked dope, in plain English, and I paid for dope in good, solid American money.

I paid outrageous prices for it, but I had to have it or go to pieces in the midst of my most important scenes in the best pictures I had ever had the chance to appear in.

I tried not to take any more—I fought and struggled and prayed, and sometimes I felt more like cursing than praying—for dope arouses all that is the lowest and most depraved in human beings.

I was afraid my mother would suspect the truth.

I trembled for fear the director on location would get a hint of it.

If one of the men or women in the play with me gave me an unusually sharp look I thought, they suspect me. I'm beginning to show it, they know I am hooked.

For I was beginning to learn the underworld slang of the dope slave.

World of Ghosts

I lived in a world of hideous ghosts.

I was trying to cut down my dose.

But the minute I reduced it I began to see faces, strange faces of old men with long beards and twisted mouths and hideous threatening eyes.

Sometimes I had all I could do to keep from putting up my hands to thrust the faces away, although I knew in my real heart of hearts that they were not there really.

I grew irritable, nervous, high strung, bad tempered, suspicious of everyone.

I wanted to be alone, and yet I could not bear to be alone.

I hated to have my mother look at me, and when she said, as she sometimes did, poor woman, Alma, you look so strange today, aren't you feeling well, child?

Instead of thanking her for her loving care, I tried to hate her for it. Of course, I couldn't do that, because I knew she was the truest friend I had in the world and always would be, no matter what I did. But I tried my best, or perhaps I should say, the worst, to hate her.

One day a dreadful thing happened.

I was working on my set made up for my part.

Aimed at Stardom

I liked the part, the director was kind to me, I was getting a good salary, and I hoped to make a hit and establish myself as a real star of the first magnitude.

I had plenty of dope and I knew where I could get plenty more and as long as I had all I wanted of that, I was all right.

I knew my day of reckoning would come, but I thought I would be ready to meet it somehow.

I will finish this picture, I said to myself, and then I will break the habit. I'll break it if it kills me. I'll go away somewhere with mother for a long rest, and I'll fight it out and get the best of it.

I shan't let anything like a little white pellet make a terror stricken slave of me. No, I thank you. I've seen what it does to other people. Now that I know what it is, I've seen it turn a beautiful girl into a haggard, trembling, bleary-eyed wreck, and I have known it to make a sodden tramp of a big, fine, high-minded, intelligent man.

Not for me, not for Alma Rubens. I'm too intelligent, too young, too wise, and too strong to make a pitiful fool of myself that way.

And just as I was thinking these very things, a call boy stepped up to me as I left the set for a minute.

"There's a man here to see you," he said. "He says he's got business with you—important business—and it can't wait."

I didn't know who the man was, and I didn't know what the business was, but something that whispered in my heart like death itself knocking at the door told me that the business was dope.

I thought it was some new peddler. How did he come to get my name, I wondered. He must know I'm on the stuff. I'll tell him he's wrong. I never took a grain of dope in my life and never intend to take it, but the man was waiting for me. He was a short, fat man with a broad face, and he had a rather pleasant, good-humored manner.

He spoke to me like a kindly man of middle age speaking to a child.

But what he said to me would not have been understood by any child in the world.

Agent Threatened

"Your name is on my list," he said. "I am a federal narcotic officer, and I know you are on the stuff."

I began to deny it.

"Come, come," said the man. "That bluff don't go, not with me. Why, I've talked to your mother about it already."

My knees shook under me.

"My mother," I gasped.

"Yes, your mother," said the man. "I've told her I'm a federal narcotic agent, and I am. I've told her I'm a Mason, and your father was a brother Mason, and I'm going to do all I can to help his little girl out of this misery she is in."

I could have hugged him; I could have carried the little, fat, elderly man around and around the lot in a wild dance of joy.

My father a brother Mason. It was all like some wonderful dream, too good to be true.

And it was too good to be true.

It was a lie from beginning to end; as false a lie as was ever told by the Ancient Father of lies himself.

Yes, he was a federal narcotic agent; that much was true. I don't know to this day whether he was a Mason or not, or whether he really knew my father, but this I know. He came to find me and seek me out and whisper to me, not to help me escape from my slavery, but to drag me farther down into the mire. He didn't care how far down I went, so long as he made money out of my misery and shame.

I had been paying enough for my dope before he found me.

One hundred and fifty dollars a tube I had been giving to the doctor who was selling me the dope, and that doctor was getting those same tubes for $1 a tube.

But he was a gentle, kindly, open hearted, generous philanthropist, compared to the federal narcotic agent, who pretended he had come to save me from myself.

He told the truth about one thing. He had been to see my mother. He told her my name was on his list. He told her the federal officers knew me to be a dope fiend. He said that he wanted to befriend me on account of my father.

He told my mother he had erased my name from his list, and from the list at federal headquarters. My mother was terrified.

She couldn't believe her ears, but she began to think, and then she remembered that I had not seemed like myself for a long time.

Child of Moods

She remembered how irritable and cross and unreasonable I had become, and then how I would suddenly change and laugh, and sing, like a creature wild with the joy of living. She told me afterwards that she could not bear to believe what the man said about me, but, by the way her heart sank in her breast, she knew he was telling her the hideous truth.

The man put his hand on her arm and spoke kindly to her.

"Don't be worried," he said. "It will all come out all right. You can't do a thing for her, not a thing. You don't understand these cases as I do. I know how to deal with them. I've dealt with them by the hundreds, the poor, pitiful things. You must not blame them; they can't help it.

"When they're hooked by dope they've got a disease, and they have to be cured by somebody that knows how to cure them, just as if they had smallpox or typhoid fever or pneumonia, or something like that. You leave it to me, I'll get your little girl on her feet again, see if I don't."

And my mother was glad. She thanked him with tears running down her dear, tired, worried face. I think she prayed for him every night and morning.

She, too, felt that my dear father had reached out from the grave to save me through this man who knew him when I was a little bit of a girl in my little home in San Francisco.

And then the man began bringing me dope. He charged me plenty for it. I spent over $300 a week, paying him for the dope, and all the time there was a threat in back of the sale that meant buy this off me, or I'll report you and get you arrested as a user.

He used to come out to my house and ask for me, and my mother was always glad to see him. She thought it was so kind of him to take such an interest.

One day she looked out into the garden and saw him sitting on a bench by my side, and something in the way he looked at me made her turn cold all over. What kind of a man is this, anyhow, she thought. He tells me a fine story, but somehow, he comes so often, and he acts so strangely. Three or four times lately when he has been here, He has made an excuse to go upstairs to the bathroom, and right after he had gone Alma hurried upstairs, too. Could it be possible that he is hiding something for her up there.

The next time when the federal narcotic agent came to see me, my mother slipped down the stairs in her stocking feet and stood behind the portiere of the living room and listened.

"You'll have to give me that $300, and give it to me today, she heard the federal agent say. I need it to make a payment on my new car."

"I can't give it to you," I said. "I haven't got it. I'll give it to you next week." "No," said the federal agent, "you won't give it to me next week; you'll give it to me now."

Norwegians Find Land in Antarctic

OSLO, Norway, Feb. 16.—(AP)—New land has been discovered in the Antarctic by the Norwegian whaler Torlyn, which has been operating in connection with a Norwegian Antarctic expedition, the whaler reported in a wireless message today.

The new land, the message said, is a continuation of Mawson land, which Sir Douglas Mawson discovered last year.

Historical Society To Meet Tomorrow

The Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania will hold its monthly meeting tomorrow night at the Historical Building, Bigelow boulevard and Parkman street, Robert M. Ewing, president, announced today. Miss Emilie McCreery will read a paper on "The French Architect of Allegheny City Hall." Dr. Alfred T. James, of the department of history, University of Pittsburgh, will read a paper on "Gen. James Scott Negley."

Real Estate

James A. Bortz has sold to Clarence Burleigh, Jr., a brick home at 1310 Beechwood boulevard for a private consideration. The purchaser will occupy the property as his residence in the spring. The deal was consummated through O. R. Minnemeyer and Harry H. Brainerd.

Two building lots, each 50x120 feet, in McCully avenue, Versailles Township, have been sold by William W. Weldin, McKeesport broker, to Albert Hoburg. The purchaser has erected a six-room frame bungalow type home on one of the lots.

There will be adequate office space to care for the needs of increasing business this spring, according to the report of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. The report contains the January survey of office space in 41 principal cities of the United States and Canada.

A lot 40x117 feet, improved with a brick home, in Frankstown avenue, Twelfth Ward, has been sold to Annie Wallace Grim by the Fidelity Trust Company for $5,750.

An improved property in Ashland avenue, Mt. Lebanon, has been deeded by Lee Richey to Raymond B. Hecht for a private consideration. The lot is 37x85 feet.

K. R. Wagner has purchased from Otto Wolfram, 124x400 feet in Franklin Township. No price was named.

PLAN CHURCHILL LECTURE HERE

Pittsburgh will be included in a speaking tour of United States and Canada which Winston Churchill, British statesman, will begin upon his arrival in this country October 15.

Churchill's recent break with Stanley Baldwin, when he resigned from the Conservative cabinet, relieved him of responsibilities to permit a tour, according to P. M. Neilson, president of the Neilson Lecture Bureau here, who today announced the statesman's intended visit.

The British leader will speak on several topics, including "The Destiny of the English-Speaking Peoples," "Great Britain and Indian Problems," and "How the Great War Came." He will remain in the country until the Christmas season. Winston Randolph Churchill was a recent visitor in Pittsburgh, having lectured before the Sewickley Women's Club.

NAVAL RESERVE FACES REVIEW

The United States Naval Reserve unit of Pittsburgh will be reviewed tonight at the headquarters, 141 Grant avenue, Millvale, by the Naval Reserve Inspection Board.

The board members, Capt. C. A. Blakeley and Com. R. A. White, of Washington, and Com. H. V. McCabe, of Philadelphia, were entertained by Pittsburgh officers at a noon luncheon. Inspection of the reserves, speed boat tied up at Chalfont, was to be made in the afternoon. A dinner will be held at the University Club tonight, prior to inspection.

Among the officers will be Lieut. J. H. Cox, Lieut. R. S. Lawson, Lieut. Allen Reynolds, Elysian Hunter Robinson, Lieut. S. D. Fulton, Col. Jarvis S. Bain, of the U. S. Engineer Corps, will be a guest.

JUSTICE LISTED FOR TRIAL

Justice of the Peace Thomas R. Gracie, of Brownsville road and George Hilpert, of East Willock road, a former constable working out of Gracie's office, are scheduled to go on trial in Criminal Court Wednesday. They are charged with conspiracy to defraud and with extortion. Anton Pollak, of Glass Run road, Baldwin Township, charges that Gracie and Hilpert shook him down last May. Several months ago Hilpert was convicted on an assault and battery charge growing out of an alleged "shake down" of a miniature golf course owner in Brentwood, and part of his sentence was to resign from office as constable.

TALKS PLANNED BY AD CLUB

Four speakers were announced today for weekly luncheons of the Pittsburgh Advertising Club in the William Penn Hotel, each Tuesday with Prof. Howard R. Maysberry, of the University of Pittsburgh, talking tomorrow on "The Psychology of Advertising."

Paul T. Cherrington, director of research of the J. Walter Thompson Company, of New York, is scheduled for next week to speak on "Advertising as a Stabilizer of Business." The two succeeding speakers will be Prof. Howard C. Kidd, of Pitt, speaking March 3 on "Railroads and Business," and Charles J. Ramsburg, vice-president of the Koppers Company, on March 10.

CHURCH TO HOLD ANNUAL DINNER

State and county officials have been invited to attend the tenth annual banquet of the Brotherhood of St. Lukes Lutheran Church, West View, in the church auditorium tonight. Judge William H. McNaugher and H. J. Neely, chief clerk in the city Bureau of Highways and Sewers, will be the speakers. Howard H. Wilt is chairman and Edward A. Young will be toastmaster. The Rev. L. P. Spoehr, pastor of the church, will deliver the invocation.

Police Hunt Gunman In Girl's Shoooting

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Police today were searching for a tall, heavy set gunman who shot Miss Vallene Urlick, 22-year-old night club entertainer, wounding her in the right foot.

The shooting occurred in front of a night club between two of the girl's admirers. The shot was fired after Harry L. Goodwin, of Morris, Ill., took the girl from a taxicab in which the gunman had placed her.

Gas Blast Wrecks Unoccupied Home

DENVER, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—An explosion demolished a two-story house here last night, hurling bricks over an area of several blocks. Firemen said apparently no one was injured. The occupants, Harry Wost and his family of six, left the home shortly before the blast. One wall of an adjoining house was crumpled. Authorities expressed the belief the explosion was caused by gas.

RAIL POLICEMAN SLAIN IN FEUD, 1 HELD

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Gentlemen who live by their wits are the despair of hotel men. It isn't enough that some customers will run up a nice bill for an expensive suite for a couple of weeks and then silently skip town. Oh, no. The sharper crooks devote their attentions to the hotel cashiers.

William Pfarr

Al Daryman, the Meadville hotel man, has recovered from the bump he took in this new racket. It cost his hotel $100. A stranger approached him some time ago and asked him to cash a check for that amount. The stranger explained that he realized he was imposing on the hotel's good will inasmuch as he had no credit arrangement, but he gave Mr. Daryman two local references—officers in companies which he said he had just sold big orders of goods.

Mr. Daryman called the two companies and was assured the stranger had just sold them big orders and was all right. The check was cashed; the stranger skipped.

And not only did the check bounce, but the two orders bounced. The stranger had explained to the companies his firm was going out of business and he sold them goods at greatly reduced prices. This not only established him with them, but gave him the references he needed. Needless to say, the stranger, armed with spurious letterheads, had invented the company he represented.

Mr. Daryman was telling this story to an out-of-town colleague, who shook his head and said: "You shouldn't have fallen for that."

A few minutes later Mr. Daryman's boss, Sam Leff, who owns a string of hotels, whispered to Daryman: "That same salesman took him for seventy-five."

Eddie McCann, the Chartiers Valley brick magnate, tells the story of the renegade husband who died. In his lifetime the husband epitomized all the faults of all husbands.

Finally the unimaginative widow turned to her son and whispered, "Tommy, we're at the wrong funeral. Let's get out and wait till your father's."

* * *

This happened on an Emsworth street car one rainy day. There was a leak in the roof and raindrops dropped neatly down onto the hat of a lady.

Her husband suggested they move to another seat across the aisle.

"I will not!" emphatically announced the female, who probably signs the checks in that family. "I'll show the street car company something."

There is evidence at hand that political influence is hereditary. Recently a group of East End youngsters asked the policeman on their beat to do something for them. The policeman did, graciously.

The policeman had said goodby to the boys when one of them, the 10-year-old son of a powerful politician, shouted after: "Hey, I'm gonna get my father to get you a promotion."

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 16.—Courageously grappling with a robber after her husband had been wounded, Mrs. William Atkins, of 820 North Main street, not only prevented the robbery of a store, but caused the robber to flee. She said:

Mr. Atkins

"I was not afraid of him, but I feared he might have confederates. I held his revolver and rolled him over and over until we reached the door. Opening it with one hand, I shoved him through it."

The attempt to rob the store conducted by Mr. and Mrs. Atkins occurred shortly before midnight Saturday. A man walked into the store.

Atkins started to retreat toward the rear of the store. The robber fired, the bullet striking Atkins in the leg.

As the robber fired, Mrs. Atkins rushed from behind the counter and grappled with him. The man bolted.

Pershing Proud Of U. S. Troops In Battle Line

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By JOHN J. PERSHING

Commander-in-Chief, American Expeditionary Forces

Succeeding chapters of "My Experiences in the World War" will appear daily and Sunday exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

On April 12, 1918, Washington reported a 140,000 increase in cargo tonnage by the use of Dutch ships. Infantry and machine gun personnel of four divisions were promised for that month.

The Allies were at last thoroughly alive to the necessity of an extraordinary effort to provide tonnage for transporting our troops. After months of delay and discussion they now realized fully that the superiority of forces vitally necessary to avert defeat must come from across the Atlantic.

America had become their sole reliance, not only for the forces necessary to save them from defeat, but for unlimited financial aid as well.

Mr Baker's first-hand knowledge of the situation in France enabled him to give a fresh impetus to the efforts of the War Department. With Gen Peyton C. March as chief of staff, the general staff and the supply departments began to exert more energy.

The War Industries Board, reorganized under the leadership of Mr. B. M. Baruch, had taken definite control and direction of the nation's industries with the sole aim of aiding us to win the war. In the face of the crisis, activity at home had at last replaced the apparent deliberation of our first year in the war. Our hope for an improvement in methods and a more competent co-ordination of effort seemed about to be realized.

Gen. Pershing

Aviation Looks Up

If a similar awakening had taken place at home in the previous autumn we should probably have had at least one-half million combatants in France for the spring campaign, and they would have been better trained than those that were arriving.

Moreover we would have been in position to answer more effectively the Allied arguments for amalgamation. As the larger program contemplated the shipment of more than twice the number of troops previously considered possible, preparations to handle men and supplies demanded intense energy in every part of my command.

Construction of storage and the extension of facilities in general, under the energetic direction of the staff departments of the S. O. S., were moving more rapidly. So when cabled inquiry came from the chief of supply at Washington indicating that there might be some hesitation in shipping over the thousands of tons that he must have known were badly needed, the only conceivable reply was: "Send over everything you have ready as fast as you can. The responsibility for failure will be ours."

The aviation question began to look more promising. According to recent cables, the shipments of airplanes from the States were expected to begin in May, and increased to 600 planes per month by October. Although the manufacture of planes by the French had slowed down for want of mechanics and spruce, we had given them considerable assistance, and there was a possibility that contracts might at least be partially fulfilled. These, with our own planes, promised to approximate the numbers that we should need for such of our divisions as were likely soon to be engaged.

During the preceding months the War Department had made every effort to secure quantity production of an improved airplane motor called the "Liberty," the design having been finally determined and manufacture started. The introduction of a new design of our own conception seemed the only way out of the bewildering confusion of this problem, but it somewhat retarded our program.

Burden Heavier

In the end this superior motor proved to have been essential to meet an urgent, general demand, and requests from the Allies for allotments became difficult to meet without neglecting our own requirements.

The burden upon our staff and supply organizations in France became exceedingly heavy. The rapidly increasing numbers of men and the precipitate rush of supplies would be of no avail unless they could be mustered in orderly fashion for the contest.

The great crisis had found us with fewer than 320,000 officers and men in France, March 31. Over 100,000 were necessarily engaged in the services of supply.

There was great danger that the enemy would be able to defeat the French and British armies before substantial aid could be brought from America.

The war was up to America to win or lose.

If our forces could not be actually put into the lines in sufficient numbers within the next few months it might be too late.

No army was ever completely trained or perfectly organized; in fact, there is no such thing except in theory. Governments or commanders who wait for absolute perfection in organization and training, or who expect every detail of equipment and supply to be complete before they act, or, in a country like ours, expect the thorough training of troops, are likely to lose opportunities and risk defeat at the hands of a more daring opponent.

It is necessary to act vigorously when the hour comes, whether everything is in complete readiness or not. It is a question of balance between opportunity and preparation.

HALL SITE FOES AWAIT ACTION OF COUNCIL

Fate of Consent Ordinance Delays Move in Fight Against Nicola Property

Before making final plans for their fight against the Oakland site for the town hall, foes of the Schenley Farms site are awaiting action of City Council today on the consent ordinance which was approved Friday by the Finance Committee of Council. Ratification of any measure by the Finance Committee, which includes the entire membership of Council, normally forecasts a similar action by Council as a whole.

MAY PASS TODAY

It is expected that the ordinance will be passed this afternoon.

Organizations from the South Side and South Hills will join Mt. Lebanon in a mass meeting to be held in the Washington Public School auditorium, Washington road, Mt. Lebanon, tonight, to protest the selection of the Schenley Farms district for the town hall site.

The question was first brought up by the Mt. Lebanon commissioners last week, and F. V. Cassell was asked to arrange tonight's meeting.

Organizations expected to send representatives to the meeting are: Dormont Chamber of Commerce, Brookline Board of Trade, South Side Businessmen's Association, Eighteenth Ward Board of Trade, West End Board of Trade and others. Besides Henry Tranter, of the West End, speakers from the downtown and North Side will address the meeting.

Opponents of the Nicola site still maintain that a change of the zoning ordinance will have to be made before enough ground for a hall on the location is available. This, according to County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong, is not necessary.

If any alteration in zoning requirements is asked the fight will be renewed before Council, it was said. Several other plans to block the building of the hall in Oakland, including court action against the County Commissioners and City Council, is being considered by the opponents.

Fire School to End With Demonstration

A demonstration of how salvage work is done during the height of a fire will feature the closing session of the Chamber of Commerce fire school tomorrow night in the chamber auditorium. The demonstration will be given by city firemen. F. H. Steinicke, engineer of the American LaFrance and Foamite Company, will be the speaker.

OFFICER HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Automobile accidents resulted in injury to three persons, one a policeman, yesterday.

Patrolman E. R. Walters, who directs traffic at Bigelow boulevard and the Bloomfield Bridge, suffered a fractured leg when a car he was driving collided with a taxicab in Fifth avenue, near Ruskin avenue, yesterday. Walters is in Mercy Hospital.

Struck by an automobile near Castle Shannon, Louis German, of Coverdale, is in South Side Hospital today with injuries to the head and body.

One man was injured when an automobile was wrecked at Hawkins and Marshall avenues, North Side, early today. The car was said by police to have been stolen from C. M. Rodgers, 117 West Erie street, at Arch and Erie streets, several hours before.

STONE PLACED BY INSTITUTE

State and city officials yesterday afternoon attended the laying of the cornerstone for the $25,000 building of the Young Men's Institute, Warrington and Curtain avenues.

The stone was placed by Charles Land, Thomas Barrett, John Bronder and Fred Christ, Jr., charter members of the organization.

FATHER OF 7 SHOT DEAD IN FIGHT

B. & O. Lieutenant, Arrested On Murder Charge, Says Victim Threatened Him

The alleged enmity of two Baltimore and Ohio Railroad detectives over changes in rank was at an end today with the death of one and the arrest of the other on a murder charge.

The two, Lieut. Frank J. Hicks, 45, of 20 Lebanon street, Hays, and Detective Charles H. Gross, 45, of 415 Johnston avenue, Hazelwood, father of seven children, engaged in a gun battle last night in the Glenwood station of the railroad after a quarrel, police said. Five of eight bullets exchanged in the fight entered Gross' body, killing him instantly. Police, summoned by neighbors, arrested Hicks and sent the victim's body to the morgue.

THREE-YEAR FEUD

Inspector James N. Hoey, of the Oakland police, said the two men had been unfriendly three years, as a result of Hicks taking Gross' place as lieutenant. When the lieutenant and the detective met last night in the station, where they reported for duty, Hicks advised his subordinate to see Capt. John Gross, no relation, because of alleged disobedience.

Friday night Charles H. Gross had been detailed by Hicks to check on cars in the produce yards. Instead, the lieutenant found him in a caboose in the Willow Grove yards on the North Side, according to police. Gross threatened him then, Hicks said.

Hicks told police, they said, that when he met Gross last night the latter said:

"If you've done anything to endanger my job, it will be the last thing you ever do against me."

DESCRIBES SHOOTING

Hicks then drew his revolver and fired, detectives said he told them. He was turned over to Lieut. Frank Ferris of the homicide squad, and placed in Central Police Station. He will be turned over to the coroner.

Gross had been in the railroad service 10 years. The youngest of his seven children is 2 weeks old and the oldest 13 years. Hicks, married, has no children. He has been with the railroad 15 years.

The two detectives, police declared, were the only persons in the depot when the shooting occurred.

NEW CONTEST FOR FOOD SHOW

The grocers' have added a canned fruit contest to the cake making contest at the food show which opens tomorrow evening in Motor Square Garden. All fruit entries must be submitted in glass jars.

Two home-made cake baking contests are scheduled. One is for angel food and the other for butter cakes. The latter cakes include layer cakes and all cakes made with butter or other shortening. All cakes, the committee announces, must be iced and made of ingredients exhibited in the show. Entries will be received and judged on the following afternoons: Friday, angel food; February 24, canned fruit; February 26, butter cakes.

Prizes in each competition follow: First, $15; second, $10; third, $5. Should any cake or fruit entered in the name of a church society or woman's club be awarded a prize, the amount of that prize will be doubled. No organization will be awarded more than one prize.

The show committee also announces that the domestic science courses will be conducted by the largest array of nationally known domestic science women ever together. These courses begin Thursday at 2 p. m. and will be held every afternoon and evening except Saturday. Evening courses start at 8 o'clock. Novel features in the art of cooking are to be offered.

Each afternoon a gift will be made to the woman's society having the largest attendance at the cooking school on that particular afternoon. Organizations desiring group passes, it is announced, may obtain them by telephoning the Retail Grocers' Association. These passes are good only for afternoon sessions.

FEDERATION'S DRIVE TO LAST 10 DAYS

Chairman Oppenheimer And Rabbi Silver Make Pleas At Dinner of Workers

Teams working to raise $450,000 for the 1931 program of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of Pittsburgh began their 10 day drive today, carrying into Jewish homes the message Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, Cleveland rabbi, gave them at their first meeting last night.

"If it is not necessary for you to ask for help from others, then give others your help. If you do not receive, give."

Five hundred and seventy-five persons attended the campaign's opening dinner in the William Penn Hotel last night. They heard their campaign outlined by General Chairman Alfred M. Oppenheimer, president of the Apollo Steel Company. They heard of donations by children of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement, by social workers of the federation, of promises of help from members and leaders of non-Jewish organizations.

Dr. Silver's message was contained in the old Jewish parable:

"God made mountains, rising in great pinnacles from the plains; mountains are mighty, but steel cuts through them; fire melts hard steel and water quenches fire; great floods of water are carried away in the clouds; dark storm clouds, in turn, are driven away by the great winds; feeble man is strong enough to thwart the driving winds and is, himself, broken and defeated by all-conquering fear. Fear, however, can be dispelled by the intoxication of wine and wine can be dissipated with sleep. Death is mightier than sleep and there is but one thing that can conquer death—charity.

"If we did not complain of the superabundance of good things in times of prosperity just past, we should not complain when we are asked to give of our shrunken substance to the poor, in hard times."

MILITARY RITES PLANNED FOR BRACKEN

Political Leader, Veteran Of Spanish War, Dies at Residence in Dormont

Military funeral services will be held for John P. Bracken, 55, political leader who died Saturday night in his home, 3230 Wainbell avenue, Dormont. Members of the family said the services probably would be held Thursday, with burial in Mt. Oliver Cemetery.

Mr. Bracken, born at Gallitzin, Cambria County, for years was associated with his father and brothers in the coal, lumber and water business. Later he engaged in real estate and insurance in Gallitzin, Altoona and Johnstown. In May 1898 he enlisted in the 17th Infantry and was discharged as a sergeant November 15, 1898, after serving through the Spanish-American War.

He was a candidate for lieutenant-governor in 1922 on the Democratic ticket and for congressman-at-large in 1920. He began his political career when elected to borough council in Gallitzin. He resigned from the presidency of Gallitzin council in 1904 and moved to Pittsburgh. He was a candidate for state Legislature in Cambria County and was an uninstructed delegate to the Democratic convention in Baltimore in 1912. He was a member of the Allegheny County Democratic executive committee in the campaign of 1912.

He was a member of Camp Hunt, United Spanish War Veterans, and Carnegie Lodge, B. P. O. Elks. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Paul Bracken; four sons, J. Paul, Mark, Francis and John P. Bracken, Jr., all of Pittsburgh; two daughters, Mrs. Raymond G. Gregory, of St. Louis, and Miss Elizabeth L. Bracken, of Pittsburgh, and four brothers, Attorney Francis B. Bracken, of Philadelphia; J. Hayden, V. Paul and M. J. Bracken, al. of Johnstown.

GAS STATIONS LOOTED, MAN BEATEN

Autoist Attacked as He Puts Car in Garage; Three Women Robbed of Money

City-wide search was being made by police today for bandits who staged seven holdups, and purse snatchers who robbed three women in various sections of the city over the week-end.

The night attendant at the Atlantic Refining Company's service station at Penn and Penwood avenues, Wilkinsburg, was robbed of $100 by two bandits who escaped in an automobile last night. The money was taken from the cash register.

Two men who ordered five gallons of gasoline forced S. L. Young, night attendant at a Standard Oil Company service station at 4028 Beechwood boulevard, into a rear room and robbed the cash register of $90 shortly after midnight.

AUTOIST ROBBER OF $145

Struck on the head while placing his car in the garage in the rear of his home early yesterday, Thomas Nicholas, of 3415 Fleming avenue, was robbed of $145. He could give no description of the robber.

A holdup man attempted to rob the ticket office of the Enright Theater, Penn avenue, near Beatty street, Saturday night, but fled without loot. He confronted Miss Anna Zyrek, the cashier, with a revolver, but became frightened when she resisted him.

Two bandits obtained $225 in the holdup yesterday of the service station of the Atlantic Refining Company, Troy Hill road and East Ohio street. They escaped in an automobile.

PEDESTRIAN LOSES $610

Two Negroes held up Charles Leborsky, of 69 Logan street, and robbed him of $610, Leborsky reported to police yesterday. The holdup occurred in Logan street.

A. P. H. Butler store, at 90 Judicial street, was robbed of $100 Saturday night by three bandits who menaced John Shick, the manager with revolvers.

Walking in Auburn street, near Lowell street, Mrs. C. L. Lutter, of 315 Laurel street, was robbed of her purse, containing $6, Saturday night by a Negro.

Another victim of a purse snatcher, Margaret Mullen, of 2324 Woodstock avenue, Swissvale, was robbed of $2.60 in cash and a string of beads valued at $8 at Raleigh and Wightman streets.

LABOR MEETING URGES STATE RELIEF FUND

Murray Cites 'Mandate of God'; Seeks $10,000,000 Aid and Public Works

"State aid for the unemployed is not a mandate of labor—rather it is a command of God."

So declared Philip Murray, vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, at a mass meeting under auspices of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, in the Moose Temple yesterday. Murray spoke in favor of the federation's proposed $10,000,000 unemployment relief plan, which received indorsement of 500 or more Pittsburgh men of various trades in the Central Labor Council.

URGE APPROPRIATION

The plan proposes immediate appropriation of $10,000,000 to relieve suffering among the unemployed and getting under way the state's proposed $148,000,000 building program. A resolution urging Gov. Gifford Pinchot and other state officials to support the plan was adopted unanimously. The resolution was presented jointly by Patrick T. Fagan, vice president of District No. 5, United Mine Workers, and P. J. McGrath, executive secretary of the Street Car Men's Union.

In addition to Murray, John A. Phillips, president of the state federation, also was a speaker. Murray, introduced by Chairman W. A. Crissman, declared the ranks of the unemployed are gradually swelling and conditions are becoming more serious.

LOCAL MEASURES FAIL

He said:

"An examination of actual conditions prevailing in Allegheny and surrounding counties reveals the total inadequacy of local relief organizations to meet the needs of the situation. Here is a condition where thousands of men and women willing to work cannot find employment of any kind. They are destitute, hungry and naked. It therefore becomes the duty of the state to render all assistance possible in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked and finding shelter for the homeless.

"This is not a mandate of labor—rather is it a command of God!"

WARNED OF DISASTER

Phillips asserted the American Federation of Labor warned employers of the nation in 1925 of an impending disaster and declared wages should have been kept on the same level with shorter working hours to insure a steady purchasing power among workers. He said:

"They gave no heed to that warning. Then early in 1930 President Hoover called to Washington the large employers and they pledged themselves not to reduce wages. Notwithstanding there have been more reductions since that meeting than in any period before in the past 10 years."

Phillips indicated Gov. Pinchot's support of the federation's proposal for unemployment relief was assured and told of a conference he had with the chief executive in Harrisburg last week. He also announced a state-wide campaign on the part of the federation to urge passage of the $10,000,000 appropriation bill. Mass meetings will be held in Harrisburg on February 24, and in Philadelphia on March 3.

What wages home-making

Every woman knows that by doing her own housework she saves real money for her family. But she saves more on some tasks than she does on others. Making a silk dress, for instance, saves more than baking bread.

But even a woman hasn't time to do all the baking and making a household demands. Some things must be bought ready made----some jobs done by others.

The work of shopping is the most valuable service a housewife performs. More money is saved in wise buying than in any other home-making occupation. The woman who goes to market and personally selects the food she buys, saves more than in any other home job.

Monday night and not a star in sight. Because of the problem of estimating the radio audience on a Monday night, it is made a little more of a problem than usual; we miss a host of high salaried artists who, on other nights in the week, have shows opening through the networks and other diversions designed to take listeners away from the armchair. Monday night is particularly choice for broadcasts of a sustaining nature and layout programs.

* * *

We always anticipate Monday night for the wonderful dance bands that seem to have a permanent place. Who can overlook Guy Lombardo, Ben Bernie, Willard Robinson or Tom Gerun?

* * *

Lombardo, by the way, has one of the best batting averages in the radio league. Each Monday night at 10 he selects a new song for introduction to the public.

* * *

Ninety per cent of them have become successes. Among them "When the Organ Played at Twilight," "You're Driving Me Crazy," "Blue Again" and "Sweet Jenny Lee."

* * *

QUESTION A DAY:

I know you have answered the question before, but just to settle an argument please print it again. Two of my friends say they will believe I'm right if they see it in "We Now Present." Aren't different casts used in "Real Folks" and "Seth Parker"?—H. Davis, Munhall.

Answer — The only person known to have performed in both casts is Elsa Mae Gordon.

* * *

Violet McKinley and Claude Morris were highly keyed for their "Romeo and Juliet" scene on KDKA Saturday night. It was a masterpiece.

* * *

Lou Kaufman said it was "sex-ellent."

* * *

After seeing young Dave McCahill wallop the ball around in the Armory Saturday night at our first polo game, we wonder why no local station has attempted to put a description of one of these thrillers on the air.

* * *

Bill Morehouse, tenor, has turned radio columnist on a Squirrel Hill paper. We're proud. He learned the fundamentals by studying this column, he told us not long ago.

* * *

Lois Bennett displayed a hitherto unknown ability yesterday when she sang "The Sleigh." It was so real we looked about the room for an imaginary whip.

* * *

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Mentioning Jed and his speech impediment in Moonshine and Honeysuckle yesterday, Clem Betts broached from Cracker a mighty fine bit of mountain wisdom. Said Cracker:

"I'd rather have a man who stutters in his speech than a man who stammers in his heart."

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Journalism, adventurous, battle-scarred journalism, is paying as it has never paid before—on the air. Radio seems to have solved the editorial problem of what to do with war correspondents in peace time.

* * *

Broadcasters, however, have yet to point a microphone to a participant on either side of the Battle of Gettysburg, or, for that matter, a participant on either side of the Battle of the Marne.

* * *

Scarcely any aspect of American life of today or the days of hitching posts and red petticoats is left unrepresented on the air channels. The broadcasters are forever tracking down the novel and unusual, but their concern is chiefly for those whose names are known beyond the four corners. To vary their activities they might hunt down the champions of obscure enterprises in our civilization.

* * *

They might, in short, give some attention to the leading rum-sniffer on the Montreal-New York express, the oldest sawdust-trail-hitter of Aimee Semple McPherson, the first concocter of the Bronx cocktail, the most irreconcilable feudist in the Blue Ridge, the best bullet-dodger on the Cicero (Ill.) police force, the most standpat Republican in the Union League Club, the chief fire-eating Democrat in the Mississippi State Legislature, the oldest living reader of the Congressional Record, the champion oyster-opener of Baltimore, the principal pancake demolisher of Barre, Vt.

* * *

Comes news that the maestros' friend, "Peanut Vendor," does not owe after all its influence to Ravel's "Bolero." Thus writes L. Wolfe Gilbert, Broadway melody man:

"I am only the guy who contributed the English lyric (together with Marion Sunshine) to 'Peanut Vendor,' but I want to make a point with you that Ravel's 'Bolero' was copyrighted in 1929 whereas 'Peanut Vendor' had a vogue and was copyrighted in Cuba over four years ago. I assume that this might be interesting to you."

It is, and we wonder if anyone will object if we insist that the present vogue in this country of "Peanut Vendor" can be traced to the sensational success of "Bolero."

* * *

Following a period of prospecting in the Hollywood gold fields, Gilbert is re-establishing himself in Tin Pan Alley as the principal English balladeer of Cuban melodies. Best known as the author of "Waiting for the Robert E. Lee," he is trampling in the sugar cane, and has come up with several hip-shaking tunes, such things as "Africana Lamento" (African Lament) by Ernesto Lecuona, "Ay, Mama Ynez" (Mama Inez) and "El Amor Sincere" (True and Sincere Love) by Eliseo Grenet and "Maria-La-Lo" (Maria, by Own) also by Lecuona.

PERSHING TALK SPURS MEN ON EVE OF FIGHT

line near Toul and sent to Chaumont-en-Vexin, northwest of Paris, to go into an active sector. I visited the division April 16 to witness the division's final maneuver in open warfare before taking its place on the front. Both officers and men were in splendid condition, notwithstanding their long rail journey, and all were ready for the test of actual battle.

Gen. Micheler, who commanded the French Fifth Army, to which the 1st had been assigned, came also to witness the maneuver and spoke highly of the condition of the troops and their efficiency. The weather was clear but still rather sharp. The countryside was radiant with its green meadows and early flowers, and one could not help thinking how different would be those other fields on which this unit was soon to be engaged.

It is a comparatively simple matter to absorb partially trained recruits in veteran organizations, but it is an enormous and difficult task to create organizations entirely of new material. There was a serious lack of regular officers in our organization in both staff and line. The I Corps had only 7 per cent of officers from the regular army.

Less than 1 per cent of all captains of the line in the A. E. F. at that time had been in the service a year, and the thought of possible immediate activity with such inexperienced leaders was not reassuring.

Expresses Satisfaction

It was a source of real regret to me not to command the 1st Division in person, and this, coupled with the fact that its entry into the battle was of considerable moment, led me to speak a word of confidence and encouragement. When the officers, about 900 in all, were assembled in the grounds of the chateau occupied as division headquarters they formed a rare group.

These splendid looking men, hardened by the strenuous work of the fall and by two months in winter trenches, fairly radiated the spirit of courage, and gave promise that America's effort would prove her sons the equals of their forefathers.

I shall lay aside modesty and record some of my remarks spoken under the inspiration of the moment:

"Gen. Bullard and Officers of the 1st Division:

"You have now been on French soil 10 months, and you have carried out a progressive system of instruction under varied circumstances. You have lived in billets according to the custom of European armies; you have served in different sections of the trenches as a part of your training and have taken on a military complexion akin to that of our Allies.

Gen. Bullard

"Officers of the Allies, in passing judgment upon your work, have expressed themselves as completely satisfied. I, myself, having witnessed your maneuvers, and closely followed the progress of your work in the trenches and elsewhere, now express myself as well satisfied. I believe that you are well prepared to take your place along with the seasoned troops of our Allies.

"But let us not for a moment forget that while study and preparation are necessary, war itself is the real school where the art of war is learned. Whatever your previous instruction may have been, you must learn in the actual experience of war the practical application of the tactical principles that you have been taught during your preliminary training.

Principles Unchanged

"Those principles are as absolute as they are immutable. Whatever may be the changing conditions of this war, those principles remain practically the same, and you should constantly bear them in mind. Now that you are going to take a place in the line of battle you will be called upon to meet conditions that have never been presented to you before.

"When confronted with a new situation do not try to recall examples given in any particular book on the subject; do not try to remember what your instructor has said in discussing some special problem; do not try to carry in your minds patterns of particular exercises or battles, thinking they will fit new cases, because no two sets of circumstances are alike; but bear in mind constantly, revolve in your thoughts frequently and review at every opportunity those well-established general principles so that you may apply them when the time comes.

"I have every confidence in the 1st Division. You are about to enter this great battle of the greatest war in history, and in that battle you will represent the mightiest nation engaged. That thought itself must be to you a very appealing thought, and one that should call forth the best and the noblest that is in you.

"Centuries of military tradition and of military and civil history are now looking toward this first contingent of the American Army as it enters this great battle. You have behind you your own national traditions that should make you the finest soldiers in Europe today. We come from a young and aggressive nation. We come from a nation that for 150 years has stood before the world as the champion of the sacred principles of human liberty.

Voices Confidence

"We now return to Europe, the home of our ancestors, to help defend those same principles upon European soil. Could there be a more stimulating sentiment as you go from here to your commands, and from there to the battlefield?

"Our people today are hanging expectant upon your deeds. Our future part in this conflict depends upon your action. You are going forward and your conduct will be an example for succeeding units of our army.

"I hope the standard you set will be high—I know it will be be high. You are taking with you the sincerest wishes and the highest hopes of the President and all of our people at home.

"I assure you in their behalf and in my own of our strong belief in your success and of our confidence in your courage and in your loyalty, with a feeling of certainty in our hearts that you are going to make a record of which your country will be proud."

The 1st Division saw its first major offensive some six weeks later, a brilliant counter-attack at Cantigny, in the Amiens sector.

That afternoon I motored to Sarcus to see Gen. Foch and sound him out regarding the prospects of uniting our divisions in a sector of our own. I told him that the Secretary of War, when in France, had expressed an earnest desire to hasten the formation of an American army and that this was also the wish of the President.

It was my opinion, I said, that early action would be of great importance in stimulating the morale of our troops and of our people. Now that the 1st Division was to go into line the people at home would expect soon to hear that an American army was engaged on its own front. I suggested the possibility that the corps might be assembled near the 1st Division as a beginning.

British Losses Heavy

Gen. Foch agreed in principle to the suggestion, but was uncertain when the other divisions could be spared, which I, of course, fully appreciated. He pointed out that the enemy was very aggressive and referred to the severe attack against the British on the Lys, between Lens and Ypres, which began on the 9th and was still in progress. But looking beyond, I insisted that the 26th and 42d Divisions might be withdrawn at any time from quiet sectors to be followed by the 2d and the 32d and also the 3d a few days later.

I pointed out that this force of six divisions, including the 1st, would equal 12 French divisions, and gave it as my opinion that it would be better to use this American group for active operations than to detain the units in quiet sectors and send French divisions to the battle front.

My understanding after this discussion was very definite that the plan would soon be carried out, leaving the exact time and place to be determined. It was immaterial to me just where it should occur, the point being to get it done.

The German offensive on the Lys was another formidable effort to break the British lines. The attack was made to the north and south of Armentieres on a front of 24 miles by 27 German divisions. The exhausted British, though they fought with most commendable courage and skill, were forced again to yield, with heavy losses to themselves and the Portuguese, consisting of two divisions, who were with them. It was in this extremity that Marshal Haig's famous order to his armies was issued:

"Three weeks ago today the enemy began his terrific attacks against us on a 50-mile front. His objects are to separate us from the French, to take Channel ports and destroy the British army.

Must Carry On

"In spite of throwing already 106 divisions into the battle and enduring the most reckless sacrifice of human life, he has as yet made little progress toward his goals.

"We owe this to the determined fighting and self-sacrifice of our troops. Words fail me to express the admiration which I feel for the splendid resistance offered by all ranks of our army under the most trying circumstances.

"Many among us now are tired. To those I would say that victory will belong to the side which holds out the longest. The French army is moving rapidly and in great force to our support.

"There is no other course open to us but to fight it out! Every position must be held to the last man; there must be no retirement. With our backs to the wall, and believing in the justice of our cause, each one of us must fight on to the end. The safety of our homes and the freedom of mankind alike depend upon the conduct of each one of us at this critical moment."

Several French divisions were hurried to the Lys front, but it was a week after the attack began before they were put into the line. They then relieved British divisions at the famous Kemmel Hill, only to be surprised and defeated themselves April 25, much to their chagrin. The battle was practically ended by the last of the month, with a gain by the Germans of 10 or 11 miles and the capture of important territory from the British, but with failure to take Hazebrouck.

New Spring Ensemble
Pattern 2108
Beret and Scarf 709

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS.

For every occasion this spring, you may wear a frock with its matching jacket and be well dressed. The new lines are a little straighter and more youthful. Extremely jaunty is the sleeveless frock sketched, with its front pleated skirt and tiny bodice revers. The jacket is hip length, and the pattern is marked for a bolero if it is more becoming to you. Printed flat crepe is used for pattern 2108, although one of the novelty cottons would be equally chic.

May be obtained only in sizes 16, 18, 20, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material.

The beret and scarf included in pattern 709, are stunning with a suit or dress. Beret made for head sizes 20, 21 and 22. Fifteen cents extra.

COLLISION KILLS AGED SISTERS

MEADVILLE, Pa., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Injuries suffered in an automobile collision as she was returning, with members of her family, from a party celebrating her seventy-seventh birthday, caused the death of Miss Mary E. Clark, of Linesville. A sister, Mrs. Carrie Johnson, 70, also of Linesville, died a few minutes after the accident.

The party was returning to Linesville from Sharon. Near Hartstown a bus of the West Ridge Transportation Company, driven by A. R. Kepler, Meadville, rounded a curve and crashed into the rear of the car, driven by Clark C. Ford.

ILL CHILD AIDED BY OXYGEN

Little Gerald Kaufman, 18 months, was reported somewhat better today in his home at 307 Kirk avenue, Carrick, where an oxygen tent was rushed Saturday night. The child, ill with lobar pneumonia, responded favorably to the treatment, physicians stated. The tent was used on several occasions yesterday by two nurses and a physician attending the little patient.

When the call went out for the oxygen tent Saturday night, the equipment was rushed from the bedside of Norman A. Krebbs, Jr., 10, of 2984 Rosewood street, Baldwin township, who had been helped by the oxygen for several days. The Krebbs boy's father today reported that his son also had showed improvement and was progressing without the oxygen.

'King of Gunmen' Dies of Pneumonia

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Walter Stevens, "The Immune," known as the dean of Chicago's gangs and gunmen, was dead here today. Immune from the rule that "he who lives by the gun shall perish by the gun," Stevens died of pneumonia yesterday at the aged of 64. Police records show that he was arrested nearly 300 times, but was punished only once. Participation in 16 murders was charged against him, although never proved. Stevens retired five years ago to leave the underworld scene to Alphonse Capone.

Wife Sees Flier Drown in Crash

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Donald Stevens, 26, Commerce Department radio engineer, was drowned yesterday when a seaplane he was testing fell into the Potomac River near the Anacostia Naval Air Training Station. His wife, Mrs. Ruth Stevens, was watching from the shore.

MAINE TRIBUTE PAID IN HAVANA

HAVANA, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—The Maine was "remembered" yesterday as 10,000 persons thronged around the double-shafted monument erected in memory of the disaster to mark the thirty-third anniversary of the sinking of the battleship.

A mile-long procession paraded past the shaft as bands played American and Cuban patriotic music. Cuban army planes soared overhead during the ceremony, in which President Machado and American Ambassador Harry F. Guggenheim participated. The principal speaker was Dr. Francisco Maria Fernandez, secretary of state.

Guggenheim made a short address in Spanish in answer to Dr. Fernandez, who pledged the loyalty of the people of Cuba to the cause of liberty.

Growing Deaf With Head Noises? Try This.

If you are growing hard of hearing, and fear catarrhal deafness, or if you have roaring, rumbling, hissing noises in your ears, go to all Muse & Liggett's Drug Stores or your druggist and get 1 oz. of Parmint (double strength) and add to it ½ pint of hot water and a little sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to take. Anyone who is threatened with catarrhal deafness or who has head noises should give this prescription a trial.

1,000 Lives Periled By Oil Plant Fire

JERSEY CITY, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Lives of more than 1,000 men were imperiled last night when fire broke out in a small building of the Eagle wax plant of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey at Caven Point and spread to the warehouse.

Chemical apparatus rushed from Bayonne and various fire stations brought the fire under control. Damage was held to a small area and there were no known casualties.

9 Held in Slaying Of Inn Proprietor

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—Nine men, one of them the alleged "trigger man" in the killing of the Blue Spruce Inn proprietor near Trevose early Saturday, were under arrest here today. They were rounded up over the week-end by two score state troopers and authorities of Bucks, Montgomery and Philadelphia counties. Three are held as participants in the holdup and killing of Edward Gamils, 44, the owner of the Blue Spruce Inn, while robbing him of $500.

Natrona Man Faces Rum Raid Charge

Arrested during a raid of the White Elephant Club, Kuntz street, Natrona, John Stundell, 40, alleged proprietor, was to be given a hearing today before Justice of the Peace Francis J. Heck, of Natrona. Harrison Township police under Chief Paul Engleman raided the club Saturday and said they seized 35 cases of beer and a small quantity of moonshine whisky. Stundell was charged with violation of the Snyder act.

Man Knifed, Kicked; Assailant Sought

Killing Climaxes 44 Chicago Robberies

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—(INS.)—A 24-hour record of 44 robberies which was climaxed when a war veteran shot and killed an armed bandit stirred authorities today.

James Cerniglia, war veteran shot and killed Tony La Pante, 16, when he and his companion attempted to rob Cerniglia in his store. The grocer whipped out a revolver and shot La Pante twice. The other bandit surrendered.

Joseph P. Cotton Again Under Knife

BALTIMORE, Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Joseph P. Cotton, undersecretary of state, a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital for three weeks, underwent an operation for the removal of his right eye.

The operation was performed by Dr. Alan C. Woods, and afterward it was said that his condition was as well as could be expected. Cotton has been in a serious condition since January 21 when he underwent another operation, made necessary by infection of the spinal cord.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

24 MONTHS OF SAVING WILL PAY FOR YOUR

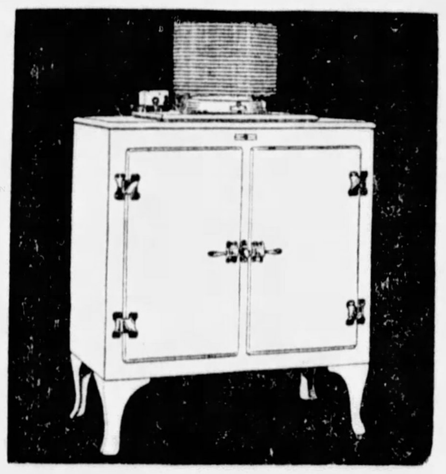
GENERAL ELECTRIC
ALL-STEEL REFRIGERATOR

Within its first three months a GENERAL ELECTRIC will have repaid one-eighth of its entire cost!

● Here's something to think about in deciding to buy your General Electric Refrigerator now—instead of waiting for warm weather.

Actual experience of General Electric owners proves the dollars-and-cents savings over old methods of refrigeration—shows that within two years, the cost of a General Electric Refrigerator is repaid in full.

The first and most important savings are due to food protection made possible by the constant, dry cold of a General Electric. Spoilage is prevented. Leftovers are utilized. Fewer trips to market need be made. Foods can be bought in greater quantities—at lower prices. In health, and in saving of time and labor, the dividends are just as tangible.



BUY NOW
ON EASY PAYMENTS

A few dollars will place a General Electric Refrigerator in your home tomorrow. Then the savings begin—helping you to take care of the easy payments.

Buy the refrigerator with the Monitor Top—a symbol of saving. Sealed within is the entire simple mechanism—permanently oiled. The All-Steel cabinets are porcelain lined, easy to clean, and exceptionally roomy, with wide shelf spaces. Many attractive models on display at our showrooms. Let us explain our convenient Winter Purchase Terms.

TOMMY NOT GOOD MATCH FOR EX-GOB

WHITE FRIENDS OF Tommy Loughran, and he has them everywhere in the boxing world, were gratified at his success in defeating Max Baer in New York recently, and are hopeful that the Gotham promoters will succeed in their efforts to reward the Philadelphian with one or more further profitable matches, they are trusting at the same time that somebody will induce Tommy to give up his avowed intention of seeking another meeting with Jack Sharkey.

Tommy Loughran

In the opinion of most ring followers, such a match would be an unwise step on the part of Loughran. He could hardly escape another beating at the hands of Sharkey, and the bout could serve no good purpose. Beating Baer and beating Sharkey are vastly different contracts. As he did on the occasion of their first encounter Sharkey probably would scorn the left jabs that befuddled Baer and kept the latter practically harmless, and would continue to tear in past them until he managed to land one of his own jolts on Loughran's jaw.

THAT WOULD MEAN a repetition of the story of their first meeting on September 26, 1929, when Loughran was stopped in the third round. In all likelihood, Tommy would be even softer for the sailor in a second bout. It was once thought that Loughran would develop into a great heavyweight after filling out and turning his added poundage into muscle, but he has been next door to a complete flop in that class, losing twice to Ernie Schaaf and failing to show his old stuff in his recent tilt with Jack Gross.

The victory over Baer proved little, as Max was made to order for an experienced boxer of Loughran's skill. Tommy could hardly be as successful against a finished fighter like Sharkey. Against Baer he was clearly not as fast as of old, he was even more careful than usual to conserve his energy by being within a step of his corner at the end of each round, and it was evident, too, that he had become a mouth breather, to avoid sinus trouble, as he explained it later. So Tommy is far from being well equipped to fight Sharkey. Besides, the memory of that first technical kayo would be lingering to his disadvantage.

LOUGHRAN IS NOT so wrapped up in his own affairs as not to have time to say a kind word for the opponent he recently defeated. Tommy is of the opinion that Baer can be made into a heavyweight of class if he is handled properly and given some boxing polish.

"Baer is the greatest prospect I ever saw," declared Tommy. "It will be a shame if he does not learn more about boxing. If he makes the mistake of keeping on as he has since he came East he will be softened up. He should sharpen up his boxing. If he does that, look out for him."

ONLY THREE OF the Brooklyn baseball club's recruits are thought to have any chance of getting even a passing nod from the management on the spring trip, so strong is the outfit in veteran timber. They are Catcher Ernesto Lombardi, Pitcher Pea Ridge Day, and Outfielder Murray Howell. The last-named is a Sally League rookie who is certain to get a hearing, not only because he carries the strong personal recommendation of Nap Rucker, Robin scout, but because the club needs a right-hand hitter for outfield reserve duty, and Howell may be the man to fill the bill. He is a fast 200 pounder who batted .340 in the miners last year.

Smead Jolley

DONIE BUSH, former Pirate skipper piloting the White Sox, has not lost faith in Smead Jolley, even though the latter hit only .313 last year and failed to live up to his Coast reputation as a slugger. Bush still believes the big outfielder is destined to be one of the great hitters of the majors.

"Jolley got away to a bad start last season," says Donie. "He was late in reporting and got practically no benefit from the spring training. But it will be different this year. In my opinion, Jolley can hit a ball as hard as any of them, and he ought to be recognized this year as a real slugger."

IN MAPPING OUT the spring training program for the Cubs, Manager Rogers Hornsby says that he is not opposed to golf as a side issue for ball players, and that any of the Bruins so inclined are at liberty to go in for it after the Catalina Island baseball workouts.

Hornsby probably chuckled when he announced the letting down of the golf bars, however. The Cubs are to have only one practice session daily, but it is to last from 11 a. m. to 3 p. m., and the chances are that few of the players will have enough energy left to do any golfing afterward.

THE MOVEMENT TO speed up basketball and reduce the wasted time brings from Ward Brennan, of New York, one of the game's most experienced referees, the suggestion that foul shooting be done away with entirely. "That's what holds up a game most of all," he says. "If a man is fouled in the far corner of the court, all the time it takes to halt play, walk up to the foul line, line the men up on the side and then start play again is a total loss. It would be better to abolish foul shooting and award the opposing team one point for, say, three technical fouls and one point for two personal fouls. More personal contact should be allowed. There should be less calling of fouls for mere technical violations of the rules.

"SAY THAT A player is dribbling through the opposing defense. He is hit on the arm, a technical violation, it is true, but his progress is not impeded. If the foul is called and play is stopped, that man is robbed of his chance to make a basket counting two points, and is forced to gamble from the foul line to make only one.

"Such minor fouls could well be overlooked entirely. To reduce freezing of the ball, two lines could be drawn across the court, cutting 20 feet from the playing area at each end, and a team could be prohibited from freezing the ball intentionally within the 20-foot area in its own backcourt."

RED DUTTON, defense man of the New York Americans, thought up the ideal hockey player in an imaginative moment after studying over all the available talent in the National League.

He says the perfect icer would be as devilishly clever as Nels Stewart, have the speed of Howie Morenz, poke check like Frank Boucher, be as rugged as King Clancy, have the energy of Eddie Shore, the reckless courage of Joe Simpson, and know as many tricks as Aurel Joliat.

Col. E. R. Bradley

NO HORSE OWNER has ever won the Kentucky Derby three times and only two ever won it twice. They were Col. E. R. Bradley and the late Harry Payne Whitney. Bradley looked to have a good chance for a third victory in 1929 with Blue Larkspur, but a muddy track killed the prospect. He keeps on trying, however, and still hopes to be the first owner to capture the classic three times. It is the Colonel's custom to enter two colts in each renewal of the Derby, just as it is his custom to pick names starting with the letter "B," and this year will be no exception. He will be represented in the big fixture of May 16 by B'ar Hunter and Barometer, and is confident that one or the other will give Equipoise and the rest of the starters a fight for the prize.

LOCALS BEAT TEAMS FROM WASHINGTON

The Lineup

Bethany		Westminster
Rush	F	Douglas
Lackey	F	Kocheran
Lehan	C	Brownlee
Hading	G	Rice
Jenkins	G	Fisher

Referee—Cal. Bolster.

By JESS CARVER

With no preliminary gestures whatsoever, the tri-state district's college basketball campaigns open this week's operations with a six-boom-bah ball game, featuring Westminster and Bethany in as important and interesting a tussle as has been played in the section this year. The classic will be staged at Bethany, with Cal Bolster as the eleventh man on the court.

Last week's play hereabouts was featured chiefly by the invasion of three varsities from Washington, D. C. For all the good the easterners did themselves, they might as well have remained at home. American U. took shellackings from Carnegie Tech and Davis-Elkins, but took Salem. Catholic University was walloped soundly by Duquesne and Geneva and Georgetown, supposedly a formidable quintet, dropped verdicts to West Virginia, Duquesne and Carnegie Tech.

LEADERS WIN

Otherwise, the week was spent in mere fiddling and jockeying for positions on the parts of the leaders as they prepare for the stretch chase. Westminster steadied itself in second place by beating Grove City. The Grovers got an even break by beating Thiel, and Thiel did the same by whipping Allegheny.

Carnegie Tech made a clean sweep of the three games that confronted it, taking Wash-Jeff, American U. and Georgetown in the order named. The win over the Presidents was the second of the season.

One of the more startling events of the week was Penn State's surprise victory Saturday night over West Virginia. After getting away to an atrocious start, when it looked like Dutch Hermann's boys might be a long, long time winning, the Lions found themselves against Western Maryland, winning hands down, and then they followed up by messing up the big Mountaineer outfit.

STATE RECORD BETTER

Now they'll come to Pittsburgh this week to meet the Panthers with a better record and the possibility of doing something right noble against Dr. Carlson's young men. Dr. Carlson, by the way, will be back on the job with his squad tomorrow.

Pitt started its two-game Eastern trip by beating the Army Saturday afternoon. Tonight they meet a tough one in Nat Holman's City College of New York club, one of the best in the East. If they win this one, they'll be right up there.

West Virginia, playing through a tough four-game program, managed to break even, which was better than the wise boys figured the Mountaineers would do a week ago this time. Temple and State took 'em, but Georgetown was beaten twice, both in Washington and Morgantown.

Tonight's clash between the Bisons and Titans finds Bethany a favorite, not only because the Green and White will be playing on their own court, but because the team appears to have all the necessary stuff to beat even the giant United Presbyterian aggregation.

FLADING, RUSH STARS

There isn't a better trio in the district than Bethany's high scoring set of Flading, Telfair and Rush. Rush is one of the most accurate shots in the game, and when he is on, he is poison.

Flading, small but fast and elusive, provides the spark that Westminster has appeared to lack in its games to date. Telfair will give big Harry Brownlee all the basketball he wants at center. The Bison attack generally appears to be superior to that of Westminster and figures to penetrate even the formidable zone defense that will be thrown against it tonight.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF SATURDAY: DOLLY MADISON INVENTED ICE CREAM—Dolly Madison, wife of President Madison, invented ice cream and served it for the first time at a dinner tendered by President Jefferson to the notables of his time, in 1801, with Mrs. Madison, wife of the Secretary of State, acting as the official hostess of the White House at the request of the President. Mrs. Anthony Merry, wife of the British minister, reported this dinner to a friend at home. In the letter, in which she wrote "with deep disgust" of the democratic demeanor of the American guests, ice cream is mentioned for the first time in history, and the credit for the invention is reluctantly given to Mrs. Madison. (See: Mrs. Hillhouse's "Memories of Jefferson.") THE WORD "BOOB" COMES FROM THE "BOOBY BIRD"—The nautical term "boob" was suggested by the name of the tropical "booby bird," whose fearlessness at the approach of man was misinterpreted as stupidity by sailors. PANKA TO BOX TOUCHSTONE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

George Panka, the Homestead heavyweight, who has been stopped by Emmett Rocco and K. O. Christner in his two most recent starts, in the Motor Suare Garden ring, will inaugurate his comeback campaign Friday night of next week, when he meets Benny Touchstone, of Detroit, and formerly of Florida, in the 10-round main bout in the Moose Temple.

George Panka

Benny may be a Touchstone, but he is anything but a soft touch, as he demonstrated when he knocked out Frank Novak, of the North Side, in his first appearance in these parts at McKeesport, several weeks ago. He is a clever, experienced boxer, with a pip of a left hand that somehow steers his opponents in line with his finishing right. He has boxed Ernie Schaaf and other good ones and has been a sparring partner for Gene Tunney and similar greats.

Promoter Apples Meyers has turned in a good job in signing Touchstone and Panka. Panka will be more or less on his mettle in this engagement. He is making a fresh start and is a bit more serious about his work than he ever has been before.

DURIS BOXES CANGY

The Moose card for next Friday night has been completed with the exception of an opponent for Harry Fine, of the Hill, in the second bout and Promoter Meyers is angling for Billy (Muscle) Scholes, of the North Side, to box him. Tiger Joe Randell, local Negro puncher, is paired with Ted

Sport Vignettes

Father James R. Cox, in his talk from the ring at the benefit show recently held in the Moose Temple for his relief fund, told why he is a friend of the boxing game . . . "I like a FIGHTER in any walk of life," he said . . . "And, somehow, when I see two boxers in their corners awaiting the bell for a fight to begin, it always reminds me of the Last Judgment, when we must go before our God in the same way . . . We are all alone in our corners; our seconds can't help us . . . It's up to us alone, and we must make our own fight."

Father Cox first became interested in boxing and the boxers shortly after his graduation from Duquesne University, when he was connected with the Epiphany Church and the Pittsburgh Lyceum . . . At that time professional mittmen were barred from the Lyceum, but, through the intercession of Father Cox, they finally were permitted to train there, and they set an example in good behavior.

"I'll never forget the early days of the late Harry Greb at the Lyceum," he said, in a fanfest a few nights ago. "How that young man could work! He was a bear for training, and, after each workout, he would take a prolonged swim in the small pool to cool off . . . He never forgot the Lyceum, either, and was one of its staunchest supporters, even after he went on to championship heights . . . Through the efforts of the boxers, who gladly participated in smokers the membership of the Lyceum increased by leaps and bounds until it was one of the most flourishing enterprises of its kind in the land. Later, when the boxers began to pull away, this interest lagged and the members themselves fell off . . . . The Lyceum still fosters an amateur boxing team, but the place long since has ceased to be a training rendezvous for the professionals."

The Pittsburgh Lyceum is rich in athletic lore . . . In the old days, it sponsored basketball and football and other teams . . . Apples Meyers, now the promoter of professional boxing shows at the Moose Temple, and a member of the famous old Coffey Club basketball team, swapped yarns with Father Cox about the hot times they used to have when the Jewish Coffey Club team played the Lyceum Catholics . . . The competition was of the keenest sort and often bordered on the dangerous as the players and spectators got out of hand . . . As Meyers put it, he wouldn't have foregone those days of his youth for any amount, but he shudders now to think of the rigorous times the players had in those hectic engagements.

Boxing writers have fallen into the error of referring to an unanimous decision by the two judges and the referee as a "three-way" verdict . . . A three-way decision obviously is one in which all three officials vote differently. When they agree it is an unanimous decision . . . Don't let it happen again.

Charley Dryden, one of the early baseball writers, who died the other day at the age of 71, rightly is referred to as one of the best of all time in his line . . . He was a stylist and did much to set the stage for colorful writing on the sports pages and was the forerunner of such stars as Charles E. Van Loan, HEK (Hugh E. Keogh), Jimmy Isaminger, Ring Lardner, Damon Runyon and a host of other satellites . . . Harry

LAST NIGHT'S RESULTS

Canadiens	1—Americans	0
Rangers	2—Chicago	1

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The Yellow Jacket puckmen can be excused for wearing complacent and satisfied smiles today as they contemplate a new week of International League hockey campaigning.

In extending their victory string to three wins and two ties the Schooley skaters last week won two-game series from both Cleveland and London, the teams trying to obscure their view of a title series play-off berth, and the nature of the schedule indicates that they will continue their advance during the next five days.

DETROIT NEXT

The Detroit Olympics, who have been beaten five times in five battles with the Jackets this season, are to make their final appearance of the campaign at Duquesne Garden tomorrow night, and on Thursday the Michiganders will be hosts to the locals in Detroit. The great power that the Pittsburgh icemen have shown in humbling the league's stronger members in recent engagements indicates that they should win both frays with the sixth-place Detroiters, but the well-known law of averages is due to start

LOOP EXPANDS TO 12-TEAM CIRCUIT

By TOM BIRKS.

The Middle Atlantic Baseball League was enlarged from eight to 12 clubs at a special meeting of the loop at the Hotel Henry yesterday afternoon, with President Elmer Daily presiding. Charleston, W. Va., Beckley, W. Va., Huntington, W. Va., and Hagerstown, Md., were the four new clubs admitted.

It was only at the end of a seven hours' battle, however, that the clubs seeking franchises were admitted. The rule of the league calls for a two-thirds vote for entrance into the loop, and the battle at the end of three hours found the count 5 to 3 in favor of their admittance.

It was apparent that the Cumberland, Wheeling, Fairmont and Clarksburg representatives favored the newcomers. Three teams from West Virginia, with the Hagerstown entry, looked favorable to them from a drawing and traveling standpoint.

TRAVELS VIA AIR

When the meeting was called to order by President Daily, at 3 p. m., Col. Russler represented Cumberland; J. W. Bugher, Jeannette; H. E. Cramer, Scottdale; V. J. Schonderer, Johnstown; Fred Dorringer, Fairmont; H. L. Clark, Clarksburg; J. E. Wilson, Charleroi, and C. Holloway, Wheeling.

Hagerstown was represented by Joe Cambria, who arrived at Bettis Field by airplane from Baltimore to fight for a franchise. Jack Stuart, former St. Louis pitcher, represented Huntingdon; Watt Powell represented Charleston, and Dr. D. D. Daniels represented the Beckley interests.

The lobby of the hotel was a mecca for baseball men from all over the district. Eddie Phillips, former Pirate pitcher, now with Charleroi; Honus Wagner, Elmer Knetzer, Red Robinson, Frank Brown, Dan Dougherty, Leo Mackey, new manager for the Cumberland Colts; Jimmy Ferguson, now out of baseball and living in Wilkinsburg, were talking baseball before the magnates started their long session.

SEASON OPENS MAY 8

Daily announced the league season will open May 8. The schedule committee, appointed by the league prexy, will not begin its work until March 5. The teams have until that day to file their forfeits, and until that is done no club is officially affiliated.

The umpire system will be the same as of last season, and President Daily, welcoming the new clubs, felt the seventh year of the league should be the greatest in its history. In fact, as Daily remarked, it was a sign of good times, with four clubs seeking franchises. Very few baseball leagues are starting out this season under such auspicious conditions.

RIPLEY TALKS TO ANZAC GIRL

"Believe It or Not," this is a very small world. Robert Like-no-one-else Ripley, creator of the famous "Believe It or Not" cartoons and prover of the unbelievable, has proved it.

Since the development of long-distance and trans-oceanic telephoning, there have been occasional stories of wealthy engaged couples exchanging endearments by phone from New York to London or Palm Beach to Chicago, for example. Ripley has relegated all such incidents to the realm of the commonplace and trivial by having a two-way radio chat from Schenectady, N. Y., with a charming young lady in Sydney, Australia, and making a date to meet her in Australia about two years hence.

SCHENECTADY TO SYDNEY

This interesting conversation took place when it was 7:30 a. m. at Schenectady and 10:30 p. m. of the same day in Australia, and made use of the powerful General Electric station at Schenectady and the station of Amalgamated Wireless Australasia, Ltd., in Sydney.

Ripley first told his vast radio audience in this country and Australia a few marvelous and almost unbelievable facts that have been depicted in some of the most striking of his cartoons. Then, at Sydney, Miss Irene Strelitz was brought to the microphone and introduced as a friend of Ripley. They met first in Buenos Aires some years ago, when Ripley was on one of the world rambles that have taken him already into 71 countries. Their last meeting was in London, about two years ago, when Ripley was on his way back from Hell, a pretty fishing village in Norway.

IS IT ROMANCE?

After a pleasant chat of two or three minutes, Ripley proceeded to make the world's record long-

NEW M.-A. PILOT SIGNS

LEO MACKEY COL. NELSON W. RUSSLER

Leo Mackey, veteran local catcher, signing the contract which makes him playing manager of the Cumberland (Md.) club, of the Mid-Atlantic League, which was enlarged from an eight to a 12-club circuit at a meeting here yesterday. Col. Russler is president of the Colts. Mackey last season managed Chambersburg (Pa.) in the Blue Ridge League.

Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN, The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXXI.

The knockout of Fred Fulton by Jack Dempsey had come as a great shock to Rickard. Tex liked the size of the big plasterer, who stood 6 feet 6 inches tall. That made him only an inch shorter than Jess Willard, whose size had Rickard mesmerized.

Carl Morris

I had taken Frank Moran out of camp at Spartenberg to try his luck against Fulton in New Orleans. This was before Fulton had met Dempsey, and the tall one knocked out my famous red-head in three rounds. Tex had heard of that victory, too, and it had convinced him that Fulton was the man for Willard. I'm afraid my admiration for Fulton's three-round finish of the man I had tried to make heavyweight champion prompted me to urge Tex to put Fulton in with Willard. He just had to be the runner-up with me. I told Tex so.

You can well imagine the jolt the pair of us got seated at the ringside when Fulton was belted out before he could get his hands up. I formed a decided opinion about Jack Dempsey that very moment. He was just about the best fighter in the world.

I still thought that Moran should have whipped big Jess, but Dempsey—well, in the end, I bet on him to turn the trick. With all my enthusiasm I couldn't heat up Tex any. He had a funny way of getting up his own head of steam, and no outside influence ever swayed him. He'd ask questions at times, but, as a rule, he was merely checking up on plans that had been booked for operation in his own mind.

CHANGES TEX'S PLANS

So, I say, when Dempsey spilled Fulton in jigtime, a lot of future calculating that had been going on in Rickard's head went right out of the window.

He turned away from championship matches and their headaches for his first love—gambling. Jack Curley had Carl Morris under his wing, but wasn't doing well with Carlos. The Oklahoma locomotive fireman was a tough hombre to handle. He was a spoiled child of the ring.

Curley matched him to fight Dempsey in New Orleans. The fight was to be held at Dominick Tortorich's club. Curley asked me to go there to handle Morris for him, as he was busy with a wrestling show in New York.

I went down to the land of Creoles and beautiful women and learned about cussedness from Mr. Morris.

Dempsey had furthered his reputation following the victory over Fulton by knocking out Battling Levinsky in three rounds and his old friend, Porky Flynn, in the usual first round.

Morris had come on to New Orleans from Los Angeles. According to the original deal, Morris was to get 25 per cent of the gate from Tortorich. Morris beat me into New Orleans and made a new deal with the promoter. Unknown to Curley, Morris had agreed to take $1,250 for his end with Dempsey. I didn't learn about the new cut in the cards until the day of the fight.

MORRIS DOES "DIVE"

When we got into the ring that night, Morris called me over and asked:

"What time is it, Ike?"

I told him, saying: "Oh, oh!" to myself mentally. It flashed on me quickly enough. This bird was going to do an Annette Kellerman. An old "fisherman," an oil well digger and a friend of Morris, sat at the ringside with Carl's $1,250 pinned to the inside of his undershirt. The boys were all set for a hurried getaway. Carl had a big car parked on the lot near the ring and a fellow was sitting in it, the motor running.

I went over to the referee and tipped him off.

"I think Morris is going to take the easiest way out. I'm not in. If he goes down in the first round, you kick him in the head and make him get up and fight. He's been paid and he doesn't care whether he fights or not," I said.

Well, Carlos, old lovey duckie, floundered around a little while and then Dempsey hooked him in the body and down went Morris. The referee could have nit him on the head with a bungstarter. He never intended to get up once he made that floor.

CARL "SETTLES"

There was an awful uproar. The crowd was hep, but what could it do about it? Morris was out of that ring on wings, but he didn't flit past without your old Uncle Ike. I wanted my dough. I didn't know what it was going to amount to, but I wanted it. If Curley was going to get the duck, I wasn't. I hung right onto Morris as he dressed, and, when he ran for his motor car, little Arthur Duffy sprinted right with him. The crowd also was sprinting. They stopped only long enough to aim something at Carl's head. Morris was so busy watching his own coco that he didn't even know I had clattered into the car as the driver pulled away from the shower of rocks, bottles, paper and straw hats. It is a good thing for Morris that he was thoughtful enough to provide that getaway car. I don't think even police protection would have meant anything just then. Even the cops were burned up at him. They take their boxing seriously in New Orleans, and this was one bout they had counted on as being good at any price.

Traveling at a rate of 100 miles per hour, the driver didn't slow down until we had hit some little jerk water station "far from the maddening crowd. The thoughtful Mr. Morris had timed himself perfectly. A train was due to pull out in three minutes. I told Carl that the more celebrated member of the Dorgan family was in a gay big city without a thin dime and that I would have to go out of my hotel in irons unless he came to the aid of the party. Looking at the bottles, rocks and debris on the floor of the car, Carl Morris' great ox heart melted.

DOES A FADEOUT

With many a mumble and a lot of hot air calculated to frighten me, the big stiff pulled out $100 and handed it to me. I had yet to save my own life in New Orleans, but, at least, I could be buried outside of the Potter's Field.

That was the last of the Oklahoma fireman and his bid for the world heavyweight championship. I believe it was my last trip to New Orleans, which I love, Carl Morris notwithstanding.

YALE CHANGES CARD, NAMES COACHES

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 16.—(AP.)—Yale University, in announcing its football coaching staff for the fall of 1931, also made known that Princeton had accepted Yale's invitation to inaugurate for a three-year period, an alternating schedule in football.

Tradition is broken by having the game played on the Saturday after Thanksgiving Day. Yale heretofore has closed its season before the holiday.

The varsity coaching staff will be Dr. Marvin A. Stevens, Adam Walsh, formerly of Notre Dame, Charles A. Comerford and Benjamin Friedman.

The acceptance by Princeton of an alternating schedule in football means that every other year only will the Orange and Black close its football season with the Blue. Since 1900 Harvard has been Yale's opponent in the final game.

October 3, University of Maine; 10, Georgia; 17, University of Chicago; 24, the Army; 31, Dartmouth. November 7, St. John's of Maryland; 21, Harvard at Cambridge; 28, Princeton.

The open date in the schedule, November 14, will apply only to next fall.

Dr. Stevens was signed for another year just before the Princeton game last fall. Reappointment of Adam Walsh will be for the third year. Comerford has been coaching since the war. Friedman was graduated from Michigan in 1927 and has been a member of the New York Giants, a professional team.

Paul O'Connor, a Notre Dame man and a member of last fall's team, has been made an assistant coach of the freshman squad. He will take a course in the medical school while at Yale.

ENS, HERE, DISCUSSES NEW BALL

PIRATE LEADER SATISFIED WITH TEAM

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

"There's more sunshine here than there is in Florida," was the warm greeting of Manager Jewel Ens, of the Pirates, today, as he landed in town after spending most of the winter at West Palm Beach.

Upon his arrival in Pittsburgh, Ens immediately went to the club offices in Oakland, where he had a long conference with Owner Barney Dreyfuss, relative to the departure of the vanguard of Pirates Thursday morning.

Ens has had considerable sickness in his family. His little son had his tonsils removed just before the father left for Pittsburgh. Jewel also has a brother ill in St. Louis, he having undergone an operation.

The Pirate pilot expressed pleasure over the makeup of his roster for the coming year. Doubtless he would like to have one more seasoned performer behind the plate, but he and his employers still have hopes of swinging a deal in this direction.

Ens, like Owner Dreyfuss, does not anticipate any serious holdout trouble. Now that Steve Swetonic is in the fold, Jewel is happy. It is felt that Pitcher Larry French may have signed his document. French has been hard to sign each season he has been with the team, but it would not be surprising if Larry were on hand at Paso Robles next Sunday when the first squad arrives.

New York City.

Gentlemen:

I am interested in selling public health to the citizens of my community. You are interested in selling cigars to all America. Apparently there is no joining of interests here.

However, when I noticed your interesting advertisements which pointed attention to the evils of spit from a public health standpoint, and what had been done by you to prevent spit tipped cigars, I recognized that there was a union of interests.

You are to be congratulated for fighting the spitting evil as you do, not because it is going to sell more cigars, but rather that it is going to make healthier citizens. I do not care how many more cigars you do sell. I am interested in public health.

You can use this letter if you want to for publication.

Very sincerely

BULL CAMPAIGN AGGRESSIVELY RESUMED

Numerous Shares Pushed To New High Ground for Year; Public Now Buying

Bull leaders felt that the quiet reaction of last week had been sufficient to consolidate the sweeping advance which preceded the week-end holiday, and while operations for the advance were somewhat more restrained they were vigorous enough to push several issues far into new high ground.

Fresh flurries were let loose in Auburn which netted gains of 10 points to 15 points, or double its January advance.

The market took on momentum as highly profitable dealings were concentrated in issues which responded easily to bullish stimulation. Nevertheless, public participation has developed in sufficient volume to encourage pool managers. The fact that several large market operators left for Southern resorts over the week-end failed to reflect any flagging of bullish enthusiasm.

News of the week-end provided little help to Wall Street in its efforts to determine whether the market is making another false start, or is setting out on a sustained advance. Standard Statistic's Index of Business Activity as Published for January showed a gain of 3.3 points over December. The Annalist's Index, which is carefully weighted both for seasonal and long-term trends on the other hand announced for January at 1.5 points under the December level.

The bureau of labor statistics reported that January showed a decline of 4.2 per cent in employment and 8.2 per cent in payrolls. This was characterized as largely seasonal however. Although such industries as steel and automobile manufacturing normally accelerate in January this is not ordinarily sufficient to compensate for the general quiet which settles upon business in midwinter. It was generally forecast the start of the year that January would see the low mark in employment and current indications point to some gain in February, with more pronounced pickup with the approach of spring.

The can manufacturing industry aligned itself with such lines as amusements, tobaccos and beverages as virtually depression-proof, both American Can and Continental Can reporting higher earnings per share for 1930 than they did for 1929. Report that the Dutch tin interests had agreed to go into the plan to restrict exports starting March 1 may result in higher tin prices, but if it definitely stabilizes tin, it should prove helpful to the can makers.

Credit was a little firmer. Call money renewed at 1½ per cent, but none was available in the outside market at a lower level, and loan calling was in fair volume.

Forbes

Stocks Follow Sentiment In Scoring Gain

By B. C. FORBES

Mr. Forbes.

AT LAST it is possible to say that something besides sentiment has improved. The security markets have advanced very substantially. Average stock quotations last week sold 20 points above the January low levels.

Industrial, agricultural and general business developments were, however, quite mixed. It cannot be claimed that the first half of February has brought on the whole any notable betterment.

CONGRESS has been a disturbing factor. The financial world perhaps naturally sees eye-to-eye with Secretary Mellon in fearing the effect of imposing an additional heavy burden upon the federal treasury through cash payments to ex-soldiers, estimated all the way from $500,000,000 to $1,700,000,000. Since the government could raise such money only by selling an equivalent amount of securities, the contention is that the effect upon the financial world would be quite disturbing, especially in the face of a treasury deficit which threatens to exceed $600,000,000. Rightly or wrongly, financial and business leaders believe that this would, by killing off the raising of new funds by business enterprises, check recovery in trade, industry, employment and enterprise.

Wall street is distrustful of Washington in other directions because of the role now being played by the most radical of our lawmakers in wielding the balance of power. Therefore the hope is ardently expressed that Congress will disband on March 4 until December.

Definite news that no extra session will be held would unquestionably have a beneficial effect on financial sentiment.

GAINS REPORTED by some industries are offset by unfavorable reports from others. Steel activity has enjoyed a rather sharp rebound from its abnormally low December level, but there is no assurance that this upward trend will last. Some motor companies are doing better than expected, others worse. Latest railway traffic figures are a trifle more encouraging, but the volume of business passing through banks is not. Retail trade is spotty, some sections recording gains and others slight losses. Employment apparently remains little changed.

Wheat and corn ended the week a shade lower. Cotton made a fractional gain. Rubber did better, but sugar weakened. Steel scrap declined, but copper moved up from the 9½-cent minimum to 10c.

ONE DISAPPOINTMENT was a drastic relapse in silver to practically the lowest price ever quoted for this important metal. In the highest circles silver's previous recovery from a shilling an ounce afforded much encouragement. The man in the street perhaps does not grasp the part played by silver in the life of the human race. It has been the currency standard for almost half of the world's population. Consequently, a shrinkage of more than 50 per cent in its value has a most serious effect upon the purchasing power of the silver as distinct from the gold standard nations. The collapse of the white metal also hurts every silver producing country, including our own.

Suggestions that a world conference be called to consider ways and means of checking the debacle should be promptly adopted. Either this country or Great Britain could appropriately take the initiative.

THE SUDDENNESS and decisiveness of the upbound in stock quotations excited distrust in banking circles. The spectacular advances in numbers of issues were clearly caused mainly by nervous purchases by bears who had sold short. Conservative minds would have been more impressed had the rise been more gradual and if there had been greater evidence of absorption of stocks by myriads of small investors.

Even so, the material improvement in security values had a cheerful influence throughout a large part of the country. And that is something because there must first come a widespread disposition to spend money before there can be any marked expansion in business.

Of course, unless industry and employment show distinct signs of recovery, the stock market is unlikely to continue its bullish course.

REGARDLESS of temporary swings one way or another, the writer still regards many stocks as extremely attractive for outright purchase.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Influenced by reports of moisture southwest and by much enlarged supplies of wheat afloat for Europe, grains averaged lower early today. A decrease of almost 33,000,000 bushels in the Argentine official wheat crop forecast, however, tended to check price declines. Opening ⅜ cents off to ¼ up, wheat afterward showed additional setbacks. Corn started unchanged to ¼ lower and subsequently underwent a further sag.

COTTON MARKET

There was considerable trading, and the offerings were unexpectedly small. Nobs and Wall Street bought on the decline, and there was a continued demand for March. This was sufficient to absorb the market on the decline to 12.18c for March and 11.81c for October or about 2 to 5 points below Saturday's closing quotations, after the market showed rallies of a few points from the lowest to the end of the first half hour.

Trading was very active later in the morning, but prices held very steady after the initial selling had run its course on continued trade buying and covering. Present crop reports were relatively strong with May selling only 11.16c or 2 points net higher while December, at 11.86c was only a point above Saturday's quotations. The market was generally within a point or two of the previous close.

LIVERPOOL, Feb. 16.—Cotton spot quiet; prices unchanged; steady; American strict good middling 6.96d; good middling 6.81d; strict middling 6.66d; middling 6.96d; strict low middling 5.76d; low middling 5.46d; strict good ordinary 4.91d; good ordinary 4.71d. Sales, 4,000 bales, including 3,500 American. No receipts. Futures closed steady: March 5.77d; May 5.87d; July 5.96d; October 6.06d; December 6.18d; January 6.21d.

Mary Lou Realizes Falsity Of Friend's Illness

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER III.

The following day, being Sunday, Mary Lou, Billy and the Sandersons journeyed out to Oakdale, Long Island, to see Grandmother Jennings and talk over their plans.

On the train, as Howard endeavored to restrain his small son from hanging out of the window, while demanding to ride with the engineer, "Why can't I ride with the engineer, Daddy?" Clara and Mary Lou sat together and soberly discussed the details of closing up the little rented house, details which would fall to Mary Lou's lot to attend to, as Clara would have to keep on with her position and break in her successor until, practically, the last minute.

For it had finally been decided that the Sandersons would accept the offer that Billy would go to his grandmother's and that Mary Lou would go with him, remaining until such time as she could make her other arrangements.

The Sandersons' boat would sail the first week in November and there was a great deal to do.

Clara Worried

"You must," said Mary Lou wisely, "buy thin clothes. You can't trot off East of Suez with a fur coat and sports tweeds!"

"It's going to be pretty bad," she said, "leaving Billy. I—I sometimes wonder how I can do it. I get—panicky. But you? If only I knew you were to be with him permanently, settled, or with someone I knew and trusted. I feel dreadfully about it, Mary Lou as if—as if I were failing you so."

"Don't be silly. I'll get along—grand!" said Mary Lou. "Something will turn up, see if it doesn't," she went on breathlessly, "there's always an adventure, just around the corner. Of course," she went on, more soberly, while veering in the red book, "remember to store Clara's Hudson seal." "of course it's a darned shame I haven't any marketable talent! Still, there's always a possibility of being a housekeeper to some delightful rich old gentleman who would die in a couple of years and leave me three millions and a house at Palm Beach," added Mary Lou, laughing, but with her incorrigible sense that life was, after all, an exciting fairy story and herself in the very midst of it. At that, fairy stories had a way of plunging their heroines into all sorts of unhappy situations and curious escapades, but there was always rescue just ahead, and even a Prince Charming. Not that she cared much about princes, except Larry, who was a very modern sort of prince.

Reach Destination

"Did he say so?" asked Mary Lou, bristling in instant defense of her relatives.

"Well, no, hardly that," conceded Clara, laughing, "but I could tell. He's awfully fond of you."

She broke off abruptly. Unsuitable as a marriage between Mary Lou and Larry Mitchell had seemed to her in less overwrought times, and still seemed deep in her heart, she could not help wondering, for one wild moment, if, after all, such a solution wouldn't be the best.

"And I'm awfully fond of him," she told Clara quickly, "but oh, I know what you're thinking. It wouldn't work. Larry doesn't love me, Clara, and I don't love him. Not in the way we should, to get married, I mean," she went on, flushing, confused, adorable in her confusion.

"I know," said Clara and sighed a little.

Arriving at Oakdale they engaged the lone and rickety taxi and drove to Grandma Jennings on, actually, Applelane street, the car sobbing and snorting convulsively, much to Billy's amusement.

Claims Illness

The Jennings homestead, to which Mrs. Jennings had come as a bride, in which Adelaide and Clara and the vanished others had been born, was set far back from the quiet street, in a garden which, in summer, was a tangle of color, a riot of bloom, a glory of sunlight and fragrance. Even now, in mid October, a few gallant dahlias and glowing zinnias stood bravely and on a great Gruss-an-Teplitz rosebush the dark red blossoms bloomed undaunted and heavy with scent.

The house was white, with hand-made shingles, the shutters a faded blue-green, that charming, mellow color. And Grandma Jennings was standing at the picket gate in her Sunday stiff black silk and her best apron. She was a little woman, with snapping black eyes and a will of her own which underlay her sweetness like a streak of steel. Her skin still pink and white and very little wrinkled; only her hands betrayed her age.

Billy flung himself at her knees with a shout of welcome. She disentangled herself somehow and presented a cool cheek to her daughter, her son-in-law, and Mary Lou, in turn.

Adelaide was in the house and lying, as usual, on the very slippery horsehair sofa, a knitted afghan over her knees. Adelaide didn't look ill and for the very good reason that she was in excellent health. But she refused to believe it and she had more aches and pains to the minute than most people have in a lifetime. She had, long ago, discovered that it was rather nice to be waited on, to have the neighbors run in with soup and custards, garden flowers and calves' foot jelly. She liked being called "poor Miss Jennings" and she adored hearing "how patient" she was "under her burden." And what most amazed her relatives, Clara in particular, was that old Mrs. Jennings, usually so clear-sighted and so impatient of fraud, should so completely believe in Adelaide's "heart attacks" and Adelaide's "rheumatics," and be even a little proud of so gloriously invalid a daughter.

Adelaide was a plump and graying blonde, with an expression of resigned sweetness now second nature to her. Billy rushing into the living room where she lay, cast himself across her recumbent form without let or hindrance.

"Softly," begged Aunt Adelaide in her die-away voice. "Auntie has such a headache. How well you look, Billy boy!" she added, almost accusingly.

Clara and Howard tiptoed up—from force of habit—to remove their insensitive son, and inquired dutifully for Adelaide's well-being.

Adelaide sat up, reached for the smelling salts which stood on a small, entirely beautiful tip-top table beside her, inhaled deeply, and then launched into an account of three heart attacks in as many weeks, a stiff knee and a sense of breathlessness.

"I just can't get my breath at times!" said the sufferer, proudly, "but—I'm as well as can be expected, thank you."

Adelaide Pessimistic

"Is that paint on your face, Mary Lou?"

"Why, no, Aunt Adelaide," Mary Lou remarked, giving the elder woman her usual courtesy title. "I never use it—I don't need to."

"Well," said Aunt Adelaide, "I don't like so much color in a young girl. Tell me," she asked Howard, avidly, "is there any history of tuberculosis in Mary Lou's family? I don't like that bright color," she repeated.

"For goodness sakes, Adelaide, no — why should there be?" asked Howard, irritated. "Mary Lou comes of perfectly healthy stock."

At this moment, as Adelaide was about to burst into description of a school friend, "very like Mary Lou in coloring" who had died of galloping consumption before her shocked family was even aware she was sickening, Grandma Jennings arrived with Adelaide's morning snack of hot milk, toast and jelly, and order was restored.

While Adelaide sipped—"No wonder she's fat," thought Mary Lou, with scorn, "eating six times a day and never taking a step of exercise! I wish I could have her for a year, I'd scare her up on her feet!"—the family made their plans.

Billy was to come out to Oakdale a day before his father and mother sailed, as Clara found it necessarily cruel to expose him to the emotional strain of a parting on a cold, wind-swept, depressing pier.

When the talk turned, as was natural, upon Howard's new position, and the Orient, Adelaide was in her element, having known several missionaries to foreign parts who had either been murdered in mutinies, eaten by cannibals or who had died, lingeringly, of awful fevers.

A little later, leaving the sisters together, Mary Lou went out to the kitchen to help Mrs. Jennings "dish up" dinner and to set the table. She was quite happy out there in the pleasant smell of roasting and baking and made herself extremely useful. She and Grandma Jennings had always been good friends and Mary Lou thought, wistfully, that, if she could only get some paying work, she would be content to live in Oakdale with the old lady and Billy. But not as content with Adelaide. "Adelaide," thought Mary Lou, in the language of her generation, "gives me a pain in the neck! I'd like to shake some sense into her. She's so darned healthy she'll outlive us all!"

DAILY TRUE STORY— 'Homestead'

"You got it cheaper'n dirt, Rance."

"Uh, huh."

The old man eyed his nephew curiously. The boy, he figured, should be feeling mighty happy over it. He had been working in the railroad shops at Bristol for three years, saved his money and when old Mrs. Jackson went away to live with her married daughter up north, Rance had bought her property, 70 acres, for almost a song.

"Yes, sir," Uncle Jeff repeated, "you got it cheaper'n dirt. That slope's good for 500 peach trees and the bottom land down there will grow the best terbaccy in these parts. You're mighty lucky."

"I reckon."

"You're good as made. Nothin' like bein' independent. You are your own boss now."

"Yup, but that house ain't fitten to live in".

They looked at the little two-room log shack with the front "gallery" rotted away, the roof caved in like a saddleback horse and the clay chinking out from between the logs.

Intends to Marry

"Well, it ain't no palace," the old man agreed, "but shucks, you can patch the roof and manage to git along. You ain't sugar nor salt, you won't melt. Git you a couple good houn' dawgs fer company and to watch th' place and start right in. I'll bet you in five years you'll have plenty of money to build you a new house and money to int'rest in th' bank."

"Five years?"

Uncle Jefferson Burgess grinned.

"Seems like eternity at yore age, Rance—at my age it's just a short spell."

"I figured in sort of gettin' me a wife and settlin' down, Uncle. But I couldn't take no woman to live in this shack, and if I went and built me a house I wouldn't have no money for my trees and seed and fertilizer, so where'd I be?"

"There's most always some nice gal for a young man 'bout th' time he's ready to take unto himself a wife, Rance."

"I suppose so," Rance agreed. His uncle drove on over the mountain to his own place and left young Rance sitting on the slanting limestone doorstep, scowling down the slope.

Everything would have been all right if, last fall when he came up to visit his uncle, he hadn't met Leola Davis. Rance had known the Davises ever since he could remember. But he seemed to have forgotten that rangy, tanned, freckled little girls can, and often do, grow up into buxom and beautiful young women.

All through the last six months that Rance had been working down at Bristol he had been thinking of Leola.

To own that Jackson 70 acres of wonderful land would make him independent in five years. To marry Leola Davis would make him happy.

Well, he owned the land now. But there was the tumble-down shack. He wouldn't ask a dog to live in the place, much less Leola.

Keen Competition

And Rance knew well enough that he wasn't the only young man with eyes that could see the beauty of Leola Davis, nor with a mind that could estimate her charm.

There was Nick Williams. He lived with his folks, but it was a big house and a big farm and Nick was rather sporty for those parts with his repeating rifle and his car and his mail-order catalog hunting clothes.

Also, down at Kent's Mills, was Curt Luther, who had become a minister. Curt had his eye on Leola.

Rance knew all about such things. To live in the great big Williams home and have a handsome, sporty husband like Nick was something every marriageable girl around would have jumped at. Also, to be the wife of the minister is to be the leading lady of the locality, to be the social arbiter, as it were.

The car stopped. Rance peered through the open chinks and saw that Leola was with Nick. They didn't get out but Nick had stopped the car and was pointing at the old house.

"Now ain't that an awful hole fer a human to live in?" Rance heard Nick say.

"It's awful old—it's about the oldest house in these parts. Rance is studyin' plans, he says, for a new house," Leola answered.

"It don't cost nothin' to study no plans, but it costs heaps of money to build a house these days—I bet you he won't build him a house for 10 years."

About the middle of the week a shiny yellow car with the cut-out open, came noisily into sight. It stopped in front of Rance's shack just as he was getting himself some canned beans for luncheon.

"Look at that—there you are!" Rance got sore when he heard this. He decided that he would go out and amuse himself by socking whoever it was that was making fun of his place.

As he strode out he saw two men.

"If you don't like the looks of this place you can get the so-and-so out," Rance said, eyeing them coldly.

"You own this?"

"Yes, what of it."

"Lay off making fun—"

"We want to take a picture of this, and we want to burn it down for the last scene. We'll pay you for it."

"Moving picture?" Rance asked.

"Yes."

"You expect me to let you burn up my old homestead?" he demanded.

"Come now, young man, be sensible. The place will blow down in the first wind. Name your price."

Rance went into the house and brought out a catalog.

"See that?" he said, showing a picture of a house that is sold and shipped ready to set up, a pretty little bungalow with roses and lawn and hedge about it.

The two men looked at each other and nodded.

Lola Surprised

"You ship me a house like that and have it set up and you can burn my old homestead."

The men went into consultation.

"Next week we'll be here with three big trucks. We'll give you everything except the roses and hedges, you'll have to grow those, and we'll have it set up for you and give you $500 in cash to furnish it."

"I don't believe it," Rance said.

It was four weeks before the picture was made, the old shack burned and the new ready-cut bungalow ready. Then Rance drove over in a new car and took Leola for a ride. He said he wanted to show her the new trees. It was a long ride, but a happy one. When Leola saw the bungalow, freshly painted, the lawn Rance had worked so hard to sod, the rose bushes he had transplanted from an abandoned farm some 10 miles away, and she saw the furnishings inside, she turned to Rance.

"Why did you show me this, Rance?" she asked.

"I wanted you to see where you and me start keepin' house after we're married next Sunday," he said.

"I'd have moved into the old place if you'd have got up spunk to ask me," Leola said, but this ain't goin' to make me grieve none."

A Workable Relief Plan

Pittsburgh Is Showing the Nation How to Solve the Unemployment Problem

It has remained for Pittsburgh to show the nation how to solve the unemployment problem.

Secretary Mellon's cordial indorsement of the plan adopted by the Allegheny County Emergency Association for putting the idle back to work leaves no room for doubt that it is practical and will succeed.

Mr. Mellon, "deeply impressed," believes the plan is "workable" and "based on sound principles." He is "convinced" it "will prove adequate in meeting the situation." He recommends it to other communities throughout the country.

These strong words from the distinguished financier and captain of industry will hearten the people everywhere. The way out of the industrial depression has been found. It is now up to the citizens to follow the course indicated.

The plan is for corporations to contribute the amount of a day's wages on the 1929 payroll and for people now at work to contribute a day's wages. The fund thus raised will be used in furnishing employment to idle men. Some will be employed on jobs for the contributors for the fund, others on public works. The taxpayers will not be burdened, and will benefit.

The plan is being administered by business leaders of broad experience. Already some of the community's greatest corporations have contributed the amount asked. The unemployed are being enrolled, swiftly and accurately.

The plan, attracting nation-wide attention, has already brought prestige to the city. It promises to lift Pittsburgh and other communities that adopt the plan out of the industrial depression at an early date.

A Great Naturalist

John M. Phillips Has Made Notable Contributions to Our Knowledge of Wild Life.

In commemoration of John M. Phillips' seventieth birthday the Naturalists' Club refers to him as Pennsylvania's foremost naturalist. Few will dispute the claim.

Mr. Phillips' photographs of mountain goats in his book, "Campfires in the Canadian Rockies," are among the most remarkable wild animal pictures ever taken. His habitat group of jaguars in the Carnegie Museum has given multitudes a vivid conception of the life history of these strange beasts.

But his greatest service has been the restoration of wild life in Pennsylvania through his many years of work as a member and later as president of the State Game Commission.

End of Buyers' Strike

Improving Economic Prospects Offer Extraordinary Opportunities for Alert Business Men.

The recent spectacular rally in Wall street emphasizes for the wider public the evidence of economic improvement which had already been observed by those capable of reading the subtle statistical indicators.

A vast accumulation of potential consumer demand has piled up for all kinds of merchandise.

The buying deadlock will be broken as soon as heads of families are convinced in their own mind that general economic prospects have improved.

Accordingly, the time is near at hand when the employed public will be singularly responsive to intelligent selling appeal.

Statistical sign posts indicate that deflation has about run its course in correcting the excesses of the previous boom.

When the public is satisfied as to this, it will begin to replenish stocks of merchandise in the hands of consumers.

When the panic broke loose, there were huge invisible inventories in the homes of consumers, which were unrecorded in published statistics.

During the earlier period of high pressure selling and instalment buying, the average family had accumulated an unusually large supply of essentials and luxuries.

Accordingly, when depression came, many decided to use up what they had on hand, instead of making the normal volume of new purchases.

Patching and repairing cannot go on indefinitely, and the time for replenishment appears near.

This is particularly true, because those who had just gone into debt before the panic through instalment purchases, have at length completed their payments, and are now off the hook.

Those who were fortunate enough to retain their incomes during the stress and strain of business readjustment have already in a year and a half achieved their modest thrift objectives.

Accordingly, the employed classes are at a turning point where they will be open to persuasion that it is now prudent to allocate a larger share of their income to current expenditures.

As long as the average man was paralyzed by fears of impending economic disaster, he was disposed to postpone new outlays. He disobeyed the law of obsolescence, and used his old car and tires longer, and was content to reside in his old-fashioned house, which otherwise would have been torn down and replaced.

This unwillingness to spend will last only as long as there is doubt about the business future of America.

Recent statistics, indicating a halt in the rate of decline of general trade, are beginning to resolve those doubts.

Whereas the basic business facts have been whispering about subtle impending changes in underlying conditions, the stock market has shouted.

Perhaps the country is on the verge of a significant shift in the buying policy of consumers.

In this, there is a challenge to alert manufacturers and merchants to capitalize improving prospects.

'A Cheerful Little Earful' -:- By Nelson Harding

It's a long time since we've heard
Such a cheerful little word,
And more like it we could hear
Without damage to the ear.

Speak right UP in times like these,
Say it somewhat louder, please,
We could listen for a year
To these little words of cheer.

Hit-Or-Miss Marriages

Some men work their way through college, some just limp through, but most of them feel that they have to be carried through in a high-powered sport-car, these days.

A man's mind is a perfect thermos bottle for keeping flattering impressions of himself at just the right temperature, and, once a woman has let him see that she admires him, it is useless for her to tell him that her admiration has cooled.

* * *

The trouble with most of these hit-or-miss modern marriages is not so much that fools "rush in," but that they always insist on rocking the boat after they get in.

* * *

There be these three—Fate, a lover and a pawnbroker—who, having found the least you will accept, will offer you just a little bit less. Moral: Never put yourself on the bargain-counter.

* * *

People wonder why contented wives waste their money on fortune tellers. But, dear me, after a few years of marriage it is worth almost any price to have somebody talk to you about YOURSELF for a whole hour.

* * *

In a man's opinion, every girl should regard marriage as a matter of blind luck, a husband as a gift from heaven—and spinsterhood as her own fault.

The lips of a sweetheart may babble inanities and still be worth kissing, but the lips of a wife must be listened to all the rest of your life.

Applying Science to Agriculture

By Archibald Henderson

The application of scientific principles to agriculture is destined to be one of the greatest and most intensive fields of study in the Twentieth Century. The invention of agricultural implements and farm machinery, of great ingenuity and sometimes of considerable complexity, has revolutionized agriculture during the past century. Vast agricultural experiments in the West and Northwest in this country, even vaster experiments on a hitherto unprecedented scale in Russia under the Soviet regime, give indication of the large sweep of the movements in modern agriculture.

Increasing study of some of the more vital factors affecting agriculture, viewed from the angle of soil rather than of machinery, is clearly indicated as a necessity for the beneficial development of systems of food supply in America.

One such vital factor is that of erosion as a factor in soil determination. It is probably true that, for certain areas, erosion has been overstressed as a factor in soil deterioration. With some types of land, especially level lands, erosion losses are practically negligible. Miller maintains that on the great majority of the farms in the corn and wheat belts, and on many farms in the cotton belt, the losses may be classed as moderate.

In regions where the climate is temperate to subtropical and other natural conditions are favorable to erosion, the factor of erosion enters as the most important of all factors giving rise to serious soil deterioration. A certain amount of erosion, as has been indicated, may actually be beneficial. If a certain limited amount of erosion takes place, the soil is rejuvenated.

New layers of soil are steadily, if slowly pushed up and brought within the action of surface weathering agencies and root penetration. Systems of cropping and general erosion control act as measures for soil preservation; and, under such treatment, soils thus treated remain most productive under agriculture.

Various methods may be employed to offset the disadvantages of erosion. The plow is constantly bringing new layers of subsurface soil to the top, and this, coupled with ample use of fertilizers, raw subsoils may be made to produce good crops. But these methods are expensive and never so satisfactory as when the natural surface soil is preserved.

Science must be applied to agriculture on a large scale in the near future. The farmers, on a continental scale, must be taught the advantages of minimizing, as far as possible, erosion losses. Moreover, they must be brought to realize that erosion may largely be controlled by mechanical means, such as terracing, soil-saving dams and contour farming.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Temptations—you've known plenty of them, haven't you? The first of every year you swear you'll put them all behind you. And, before the week is up, they're plucking at you again.

The temptation to lose your temper, to loaf, to lie, to gossip, to nag, miserable habits, how they waste your life. You know it. But there's another temptation—the commonest of all and the most wasteful—yet you rarely recognize its danger. Krishnamurti, the young Indian mystic, has a phrase for it.

Sorrow, a temptation? Sorrow, a sin?

"It can't be," you say. "Sorrow's sacred. Sorrow is a cross God has given us to bear."

Is it? Honestly, now—think it over. How much has God had to do with most of your sorrow or my sorrow? Was it a cross made in heaven . . . or was it a plaster we manufactured through our own cussedness and hung on our own necks?

And even when sorrow isn't of our own making—even when it comes as a blow in the dark, breaking our hearts—should we surrender to it? Should we allow it to tempt us from the ways of healthy living?

Most of us do allow sorrow to tempt us. Our sorrow, that at first was a natural and reasonable pain, soon becomes an indulgence, an alibi, an escape. Of course, we don't admit even to ourselves, that we are using sorrow for such selfish ends. We honestly think we can't help grieving. But all the time, through that grief, we're ducking life and gratifying our conceit.

Normally, we'd have to grub along without much attention or special consideration, consuming our own smoke. But once give us a broken heart and how our condition alters! Everyone pities the broken hearted. Everyone listens to them. No one criticizes them or demands too much of them. Nine out of 10 of us take advantage of this fact.

We coddle our broken hearts as though they were something unique in human history. We grow as conceited over them as we do over our small hands, our new automobile or our football record. We wallow in tears as drunkards wallow in booze. We use them as an excuse for our cowardice and laziness. We use them as an escape from responsibility. And who dares call us for it? No one.

I know. I've done it. That's why I get so mad when I talk about it.

"The temptation to sorrow"—the slyest and most wasteful of all human habits.

Sorrow in itself—no one can evade that. And it's well that we can't. For suffering is a normal accompaniment of growth and all growing souls must experience it. Take suffering as a growth—allow it to lead you on into wider, braver adventures . . . and suffering becomes a great experience. But make a gratification of suffering and it becomes a vice.

We've no more right to wallow in grief than we have to wallow in booze or drugs or any other form of personal indulgence. No pain, however poignant, is an excuse for dodging life. Broken-hearted people who drop out of the ranks and batten, thereafter, on sympathy and tears, aren't martyrs. They're moochers.

"The temptation to sorrow"—look out for it! Dare to live. Dare to be hurt. But don't let hurt become a habit.

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Antique Door Knocker

It came from London, from old Cheapside, dim
With smoke and grime and fogs of untold years,
Brought thither by some mad collector's whim,
A thing to move the heart to mirth—or tears!
Old brass, now polished into newer guise
Than it has worn for many and many a day;
Some tourist soon will pounce upon this prize
And, with rejoicing, bear it far away.

It is a hand of long and lovely lines
That holds a ball to fall upon the plate,
And, touching it, receptive thought divines
How once the knocker was the hand of Fate—
Who lifted it, in tragic mood or gay,
At that old door in what forgotten street?
Within, who stood till echoes died away,
Striving to still a heart's too heavy beat?

Text for Today I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.—Galations, ii:20.

Russia in the North

ON A RUSSIAN ICE BREAKER.

This interesting picture shows a man looking out from the bow of a Russian ice breaker, the Georgi Sedow, breaking a path through the thick ice of the Far North.

The mother love referred to in the heading above is not Russian but polar bearish. The lookout, on the powerful ice breaker crashing through the thick floes, sees ahead of him a huge mother polar bear, her cub trudging along behind her. The noise of the crashing ice is frightening, the strange figure of the big ship appalling.

If the end of this story could be told, it might show the mother and cub bleeding on the ice, each with a bullet in its head, the two made later into a large and a small polar bear skin rug.

What interests us here is the picture of mother love that is the same all over the earth.

On the equator, a mother elephant or gorilla, will sacrifice life without hesitation for its young. And here in the frozen North it is the same. The father of that cub might run and probably would, if outmatched.

But the mother would fight to the death. Nothing else interests her where the welfare of the cub is concerned.

You are interested also in the enterprise shown by the Russian government in sending out the great ice breaking ship under Prof. Otto Schmidt, making the trip from Archangel to Francis Joseph Land, exploring shores hitherto unknown, in the Kara Sea.

The modern Russian government is perhaps misjudged by us in America. We speak of it generally as a lot of "Communists and Anarchists," talking wild theories in Moscow. The fact is that Russia is building up a gigantic industrial program. The most magnificent machinery made in the United States goes to Russia. And the Russians somehow or other pay for it, AND IN GOLD, and they hire our best engineers.

The present Russian government is in many ways like the most powerful Russian governments in the past, especially like that of Peter the Great, who made Russia a modern nation, importing scientists from Western Europe, sending them to develop gold mines and other mines in far off places, building a great navy.

All that Peter the Great did, and more than he ever dreamed of doing, the present Russian government is at least attempting.

It has no upper class expenses, none of the horrible waste of the czars and grand dukes, and it may go farther than its enemies imagine.

Returning to the mother bear and her cub, there is something in that sight in the Far North to make any man thoughtful, especially the man who believes that in this world everything is accidental.

It was not any "fortuitous concourse of atoms" that created the affection that fills the heart of every mother.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 16.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Up and James Montgomery Flagg dropped in and sketched me in charcoal, the most perfect likeness I ever beheld. Yet it seemed unnecessary for Irvin Cobb, happening by, to peek over his shoulder and exclaim: "What a morbid pastime!"

So to breakfast with H. N. Swanson, editor of College Humor, who could talk nothing but his approaching marriage to Miss Ruth Taylor, a fair maid of Kansas City. Nor is it likely he will purchase mother-in-law jokes for his brochure from now on.

Home and puttering about found a $10 bill in an old bill fold and off with my wife to the news reels. Then along Broadway, deciding to walk five blocks north, turn right and dine in the first restaurant. It was Russian and pretty terrible.

Leon Gordon, the portrait painter, has transferred the indescribable charm and pathos of Miss Helen Keller to canvas, the sittings taking place at her home at Forest Hills, Long Island. Mr. Gordon began the work with a tender sympathy for one so afflicted, but as it progressed and he came to know his subject he said: "She is the most supremely happy woman I have ever known."

* * *

Fate's bludgeonings failed utterly to quench Miss Keller's unconquerable spirit. Those who have seen her are invariably impressed by the quality of her smile. No one close to her ever heard her whimper. What to most people would be a living horror is to her a quixotic adventure in happiness.

Personal nomination for the dreamiest eyes in town—those of Mrs. Dean Cornwell.

Vincent Astor, nearing his fortieth birthday, is not the rich flaneur of popular imagination. Rather, has he settled to an easy-going life of comparative unexcitement. He attends few social affairs and is only an occasional patron of the theater. Last summer I chanced upon him dining alone in the crepuscular charm of Foyot's in Paris. The other week I ran across him enjoying a solitary hike along upper Riverside Drive. Yet despite these sedate attenuations, young Astor is said if in the mood to be the life of dinner parties.

David Warfield has received the highest offer to date to appear in a screen play. So far he rejected all offers, preferring to rest on his legitimate stage honors rather than invite possibility of ending his professional career with failure. He can afford to indulge this viewpoint, being the world's richest actor. He bought real estate while others were buying A-1 stocks so highly touted by the very best banks.

Warfield's retirement is surrounded by an obscurity almost as complete as that of Maud Adams. Only a few pinochle playing intimates see him.

The actor's thriftiness has long been a topic for badinage among lesser improvidents who foregather at the Lambs. There is that story of workmen descending upon West Forty-fourth street one night and making a deep gulley of the thoroughfare in the search of a broken conduit. Someone approached William Collier, standing on the Lambs steps. "What's the idea of tearing things up this way?" he asked.

Mayor Walker's political future is, of course, uncertain. He recently philosophized that after several years in office he found "the glitter all off, the glory gone." With two exceptions, every New York Mayor stepped from that high office to comparative oblivion. One of the exceptions, John T. Hoffman, became Governor. The other to achieve high honors was DeWitt Clinton.

"You are a grand person," telegraphs a lady. "My producer never noticed me until you searched me out for two line praise. It was a big feather in my cap."
